GARDEN, FARM, BEES, ETC.

The Greenhouse Azalea, from the Weekly Irish Times:—Wherever these floriferous hard-wooded plants have been grown, we may say that during the past month nothing could exceed their beauty; and now that they are getting beyond their season of flowering, and the plants beginning to look rather shabby, they are often neglected in one way or other, and principally in the matter of picking off the seed-pods and the keeping of the foliage clear of thrips and other insect pests. It is at this season the plants begin to push their young wood, on the vigorous development of which next season's flowering depends. The plants should be placed together in a cool frame or pit and syringed with an insecticide. They may be kept fairly close until the young shoots are fairly under way and the weather becomes more genial, when they will be benefited by being placed on a bed of clean coal-ashes out of doors for the summer months.

MANY FAMOUS HERDS IN THE PRIZE LIST

SHARP COMPETITION IN SHEEP, POULTRY AND BUTTER

WHILE the number of entries for the Spring Show, particularly in the Aberdeen-Angus classes, was slightly below last year's figures, the general quality of the animals exhibited was well up to Ballsbridge standard.

In the Shorthorn section, with the somewhat limited competition in the male classes, entries were rather overshadowed by Major H. C. Robinson's famous bull, Magheramorne Master Key—a red, low-set bull, after Cruggleton Rock. It has been champion at Ballsbridge and Balmoral on several occasions, and was again supreme in the breed this year. Major Robinson also supplied the runner-up for the championship in a younger bull, Magheramorne Commodore (by Magheramorne Misanthrope). Both were of his own breed.

The female championship of this breed went to Mr. J. F. Wright for Prumplestown Marigold 13, a symmetrical red heifer, after Gargaston Highland Leader. The reserve for this championship was won by Very Rev. Canon Johnson, of Dromiskin, Co. Louth, for his roan cow, Orphan Jane, and it was only after Mr. R. Lynch, of the Department of Agriculture, had been called in as referee that the final decision was made in favour of the heifer.

In this division the pure-bred Shorthorn cows were an outstanding class.

In the limited competition among the Aberdeen-Angus cattle the champion bull was sent forward by a Northern breeder, Mr. James Lees, of Stewartstown. His exhibit, Equiposer of Balliintomb (bred in Scotland, after Permo of Kinermony), which already had gained honours at Balmoral, was clearly the champion.

The reserve champion was Somerton Marie, a heifer by Roamer of Money, entered by the Hon. T. K. Laidlaw.

Mr. Harry Franks, Major John Alexander and two Northern exhibitors—Mr. Colin C. Edwards and Mr. F. A. Boyd—were among the first prize winners in this section.

Herefords made a good show, and the champion was shown by the Rev. Britain Lougheed—Lisnabin Defiance, by Tyro of Coolamber. The reserve champion was a younger bull, Johnstown Fireman, by Castlecoote Armada, owned by Mr. James E. Kennedy.

The Jerseys, with 104 entries, were second in numbers only to the Shorthorns, and the entry probably constituted a record for this section at Ballsbridge. They were a nice lot, and Mr. Alfred C. R. Bewley took the championship with his bull, Violet Hill Ronald.

The Earl of Dunraven took the championship and the cup for the best group of Kerry cattle for the second year in succession. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Mr. John O'Neill, these classes were judged by Mr. R. Lynch.

There was a good display of long-woolled and short-woolled sheep, and although competition was limited in some of the classes it was generally accepted that the entries were very representative of the respective breeds.

There was a good entry of large white pigs, the champion boar being shown by the Irish Peat Development Co., Ltd. The champion sow was sent forward by the Rev. Bro. Jarlath Edwards.

LISABIN DEFIANCE—Winner of the special medal for the best Hereford in the Show. Owner—Rev. Britain Lougheed, M.A., Clara House, Clara, Offaly.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Lord Glentoran and his Title : Acknowledgments to Oscar Wilde
The Art of the Thatched : Joseph Campbell
"Safety First" Alphabets

Lord Glentoran

A Belfast correspondent writes:—

I was interested to see the paragraph in "An Irishman's Diary" on Saturday with reference to Lord Glentoran and the association of his title with the name of a well-known Belfast football club. It would not be correct, however, to suggest that Lord Glentoran took his title from the club.

LORD GLENTORAN.

As a matter of fact, both Lord Glentoran and the football club adopted the name Glentoran from a district of East Belfast, formerly known as the Glentoran House Estate. This Glentoran district is now part of the Dixon estate, and Lord Glentoran's father, the late Sir Daniel Dixon, Bart., who was seven times Lord Mayor of Belfast, built a considerable number of houses in this area, many of which are occupied to-day by shipyard and aircraft workers.

The Glentoran football ground, "The Oval," also is part of the Dixon estate.

Lord Glentoran is an enthusiastic supporter of the Glentoran team, as he is, indeed, of all sporting organisations in East Belfast and the North generally.

Joseph Campbell

I see that in the current number of the Dublin Magazine there are three lyrics over the name of Joseph Campbell. As far as I can gather, these are the first fruits of his work since he returned from America.

He is staying out in his cottage in Glencree at the moment, and seems to be enjoying it immensely after the insanities of American life. I met him out there some time ago, came in on him to find him with an apron tied around him, a paint-brush in his hand, new shelves on the walls, and the pride of a job well done in his eyes. His voice has just the slightest touch of the American drawl, just enough to be attractive, not enough to be annoying.

There is an open-air simplicity in the three pieces, redolent of Glencree itself, reminiscent of "On the Land."

From a brief biography, I find that Joseph Campbell was born in Belfast in 1879, and educated there; he became associated with the Ulster Literary Theatre, which later became the Ulster Players. He passed from Belfast to London, to Wicklow, to New Jersey, and so back to Wicklow. He was elected a member of the Irish Academy of Christian Arts in his absence.

Killing Time

The reporters on a famous Belfast paper play chess when they have nothing else to do in the office. Dáil reporters play the card game known as "rummy" when they have a spare minute, often sacrificing their tea hour and their tea money in the process.

The editorial staff of a Dublin newspaper solves The Times cross-word puzzle in the intervals between work. In another paper the only recreation is going out for a drink—not necessarily an intoxicating drink.

I have seen reporters in this paper studying languages in their spare time. The most difficult thing to do in a newspaper office or on an assignment is to read a book, and even newspapers can be read only cursorily.

A Dying Art?

In many parts of Ireland the art of the thatcher appears to be dying. Around the south-east, however, there is still plenty of work for thatchers, and I was pleased to learn that there are some young men who have taken up this work. There is nothing more charming—in this age of stereotyped labourer's cottages—to come across a well-kept thatched cottage.

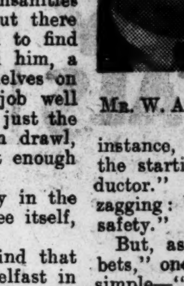

I found that there is some difference of opinion as to the length of time a thatch should last. Some people put it as low as three years, while others say that a good thatch will last for twelve or fifteen years. An expert on these matters, however, tells me that it is largely a matter of the pitch of the roof and how quickly it throws off rain water. It is generally conceded, too, that a thatch in England will last longer than one in this country—but I can discover no good reason for this difference. Thatchers have told me that straw which has been cut by a machine is not as good for their work as that which has been cut with a scythe; is this a fact, or just conservatism on their part?

One thing I do know. A thatched house is delightfully warm in winter and pleasantly cool during the hot days of summer.

Safety First

Mr. W. A. Podesta, the Honorary Secretary of the "Safety First" Association of Ireland, informed me on Tuesday that the Association has a stand at the Spring Show this year. Truly enough, I found it there yesterday, and well worth a visit the stand is.

Mr. Podesta also has sent me the association's latest publications. These are a second edition of its "'Safety First' Handbook for Children," which is now well-known—though not so well as it ought to be—and a new booklet, "The Pedestrian's Handbook."

MR. W. A. PODESTA.

Both of them are very brief, and very practical. I rather admire the ingenuity with which "The Pedestrian's Alphabet" in the new publication has been compiled. "B," for instance, stands for "'Bus: Don't ring the starting bell; leave that to the conductor." "Z" is easy enough—"Zigzagging: Avoid this; make straight for safety."

But, as always in the case of "alphabets," one looks for the "X." It is quite simple—"X-roads: Observe extra care here." "Q" is even more ingenious—"Be courteous at tram and 'bus stops; join the queue," while "J" affords no difficulty at all—"J-walker: Makes accidents almost inevitable."

The "Handbook for School Children" has an alphabet, too, being "The Sad Story of Arthur Paul Brown, Who Did Not Obey the Traffic Rules." Buy a few copies, and hand them out to your friends.

Mahaffy and Wilde

Yesterday, for the very reasonable sum of threepence, I picked up a second-hand copy of Mahaffy's "Social Life in Greece from Homer to Menander"—presumably, a copy of the original edition, since an antique "Who's Who" tells me that this work was first published in 1874, the date on the title-page.

The author is described merely as the Rev. J. P. Mahaffy, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin. He had not even a doctorate at that time, let alone a knighthood.

A reference in the preface interests me. It runs:—

"Wherever modern writers have suggested to me interesting views or quotations, I trust I have fully acknowledged my obligations. I cannot do so adequately to my old pupils, Mr. H. B. Leech, of Caius College, Cambridge, and Mr. Oscar Wilde, of Magdalen College, Oxford, who have made improvements and corrections all through the book."

A Sportsman's Review

Athletic Brothers from Roscrea : Ireland's Material Going to Waste : The Mixed Foursomes Cup

By PAUL DENIS

Two Record-Breakers

EVEN in the "old days," when every sportsman was bigger physically, according to those who recall the past, than present-day youth, can two more remarkable specimens have been seen than the brothers Flanagan, of Roscrea? At the Leinster Schools' athletic championships on Saturday Brendan Flanagan won the senior 100 yards in the record time of 10 2-5 secs.—remarkable time on a grass track—and the 100 yards hurdles in 14 3-5 secs. His younger brother, Donal, was an easy winner of the junior sprint in 10 4-5 secs., and also set up a record in the 7lb. shot with 50ft. 10ins. As the younger boy also assisted Mount St. Josephs to win the junior relay, it was a nice day's work for the family. Apart from their natural ability to run, jump and hurl weights, these two brothers are magnificently built, and would make perfect material for a first-class athletics coach. No American world-beater could start with better physical advantages than these two boys; with proper coaching they would break records in top-class circles in a few years' time. They might also achieve big things at Rugby. With his weight and speed Brendan Flanagan is already a formidable proposition as a wing three-quarter, but very little use was made of him on the Roscrea team in the Schools Cup last season. Standing head and shoulders above every other fifteen years old on the field, Donal Flanagan's size has proved something of a disadvantage, as there has been an inclination to bring him along too fast; he also is material for future Irish Rugby teams.

Standard Higher Than Ever

Athletics being in the state they are in this country, one can only assume that none of the boys who competed at Blackrock College on Saturday will have a chance of realising their promise, despite the fact that the general standard has never been higher than it is at present. In the past Irish athletes shone particularly in the field events. We had a number of men who could jump higher and longer and throw weights further than anyone else in Europe. In recent years our skill in field events has been of no avail against the vastly superior and highly scientific training and coaching employed in other countries, especially Germany, and we are rapidly becoming a forgotten nation in athletics. Yet we have a boy of less than fifteen years of age who can clear a height of 5 feet 5½ inches, and another, similarly young, who accomplished a long jump of 20ft. 5½ins. Brought along properly, Master Fitzgerald would be able to add a foot to his high jump, and 6ft. 5½ins. would put him into Olympic class. Shot putting is only half dependant on physical strength; timing and wrist work are equally important, and without a knowledge of them D. Flanagan will never achieve over 50 feet with the 16lb. shot, which should be within his capabilities in four or five years' time. It makes one sad to think of such grand material going to waste every year in Ireland.

Handicap Limit Too High?

It was satisfactory to see one of the short handicap pairings winning the Open Mixed Foursomes Cup at Milltown Golf Club last Saturday; for it seems to me that the whole object of this event is in danger of being lost. When the competition was originated the idea was to bring together, as far as possible, the leading men and women players in the country. It was not possible to emulate the English competition held at the London club, Worplesdon, and play it off scratch, as there were not sufficient first-class women players here to ensure a satisfactory entry; so a combined handicap limit of eighteen was set. At the start the majority of the pairings were well below this mark, but gradually long handicap players have been joining up, and, receiving their allowance of strokes, they have been doing well, as they have frequently played better golf than their allowance warranted. However well they played, such partnerships are bound to lower the standard of what should be an important event, and it seems to me that a lowering of the handicap limit should be seriously considered. If a limit of, say, twelve was set, the entry might decrease in size for a time, but the standard of golf would improve considerably.

Time Factor in Cricket

To the non-cricketer two of Saturday's matches in the Leinster Senior League provoke a sense of irritation. Dublin University required only two runs to win with the last pair in when time was called, while Clontarf were in a hopeless position against Merrion, 67 runs behind with one wicket to fall, when stumps were drawn, leaving both matches drawn. The time factor, however, is absolutely essential in cricket, and the game is very dull without it. To the keen follower of the game it is fascinating to watch batsmen defending their wickets desperately against bowlers and fieldsmen, who are on their toes and taking every chance to try and separate them before time has run out. It is also entertaining to watch a side throw wickets away in an attempt to get the runs in the allotted time. Even in Australia, the home of "timeless" cricket, they have changed their rules in the big inter-State competition for the Sheffield Shield, and instead of playing every game to a finish they allow four days, which has resulted in increasing interest. When Test cricket is resumed it is quite possible that a time limit may be set for the great encounters between England and Australia in the latter country.

Boxer Tennis Player

An interesting first appearance in the Irish hard court tennis championships at Elm Park was that of John Kennedy, one of Ireland's leading amateur boxers of a few years ago. He was unfortunate in meeting the holder, A. E. Fannin, in the first round of the singles, and consequently his sojourn in that event was somewhat brief, and it was not helped by a cut knee due to a heavy fall. Kennedy has a good deal to learn about tennis as yet, but he is so keen that he ought to improve rapidly. He had a distinguished career as a boxer, winning the Irish light-weight title in 1932 and the welter-weight in the two following years. Quick on his feet, and particularly expert at short right-hand punches to the jaw, he gained a number of splendid victories in international contests.

WOMEN AT THE SHOW

CONSIDERABLE PURCHASES AT THE TRADE STANDS

Money was being spent yesterday at the Spring Show, and women formed a fair proportion of those who made purchases.

The exhibits this year were as numerous and varied as ever. From the woman's point of view there is practically nothing she needs which this country cannot supply, from clothing and food to household necessities of every kind.

WEARING APPAREL

In the Members' Hall the Irish Homespun Society provide Irishwomen with tweeds of every colour and weave (a great deal of which is already sold), and handicrafts of every description. The unvarnished wooden bowls and plates are an artistic economy in the modern home, and handsome scarves in gay colours are among the many useful articles of apparel on view.

Knitwear in Ireland is raidly coming to the industrial forefront, and there are several stands devoted to this trade; jumpers, cardigans, pull-overs, and even two-piece costumes are all being shown in new styles and colourings.

Irish hand-embroidery has always been a famous art, and the Spring Show sees the same people from all over Ireland take up their usual positions in the halls with representative collections of delicately executed work.

FURNISHINGS

Furnishings occupy a conspicuous place in the various halls, the more modern tweed upholstery, on plain, unvarnished wood, being in close proximity to the products of the numerous large furniture firms in the city.

Kitchen appliances are always an attraction for women, and there is always a crowd of interested spectators surrounding the stands where demonstrations of cookery are being carried out on a new type of cooker, and at all these stands assistants yesterday were giving helpful answers to queries.

Yesterday being the first day, the crowds were smaller than they will be later in the week, and it was possible to see everything in comfort.

WOMEN'S FASHIONS

From the fashionable point of view, there is not very much to record; for the uncertainty of the weather prevented women from wearing anything that rain might spoil, and tailored tweed suits and country clothes were most generally worn. As the week wears on, however, with the events in the jumping enclosure assuming a social nature, visitors to this country will probably depart with the impression that Irishwomen are amongst the best-dressed in the world. They are certainly the luckiest; for, in spite of what the future may hold, to-day, at least, they are living in a country at peace, where the national industries are in a flourishing condition.

IONA CONCERT PARTY

INAUGURAL PERFORMANCE

The Iona Concert Party gave its inaugural performance last night in the Father Mathew Hall, Dublin, when the enjoyable programme was well received by a large audience.

Under the auspices of the Social Union of Alexander Thom and Co., Ltd., printers, the concert party aims at giving voluntary performances for any charity that cares to utilise their services. The proceeds of last night's performance went to the building up of the funds of Thom's Athletic and Social Union.

The programme consisted of chorus, songs and solos, dramatic sketches and humorous dialogues, national dancing and burlesque scenes.

John Keyes, who won the recent "Bing Cosby" competition, was among the entertainers, and Miss Alice Flood was the accompanying pianist throughout.

Among others who took part in the entertainment were: Isabel Maher and Jenny Cook, who danced an Irish hornpipe; George Godfrey, Willie Quill and Desmond Flood, who entertained with "Topical Tips," and Carmel Ellard and Dudley Tennant, vocalists. The producer was D. G. Tennant and Matt Stephenson was stage manager.

CHRISTIANITY AMONG THE JEWS

WORK OF CHURCH OF IRELAND SOCIETY

The Bishop of Killaloe presided at the annual meeting of the Church of Ireland Jews' Society held yesterday in the Missionary Hall, Molesworth street, Dublin.

Canon A. Cross, Secretary, presented the 122nd annual report, in which it was stated that during the year 271 parishes were visited by deputations and 276 sermons were preached. The mission staffs in Belfast, Dublin and Cork had visited Jews in Waterford, Limerick, Galway, Drogheda and Derry, and in other parts of Eire and Northern Ireland, and altogether had paid 2,592 visits and held 108 meetings and classes and distributed 36 New Testaments and 107 tracts.

The society continued its refuge work among the Protestant Hebrew Christians by placing children in schools, arranging for adult cases in private houses, and, before the war, in assisting several to emigrate to Australia, America and England. In Cork Miss Bird continues her good work, and was cordially welcomed by the Jews.

The committee extends grateful thanks to all who have furthered the cause of the society during the year, particularly to Mesdames Jobson, Cross, Ireton Jones, Kirkham and Harloe Phipps; and to the Misses Colston, M. Day, N. Arthurs, Griffin, Kameke and D. Comben.

The Rev. Martin Parsons, sometime head of the Warsaw Mission, gave an account of the work in the Jewish mission fields, and said that the work in Poland had now practically ceased.

The Rev. Dr. Wyse Jackson, of Ballymackey, said that no less than 40,000 Jews have been converted to Christianity since the war started.

The report was adopted, and the meeting concluded with prayer, led by the Dean of Christ Church.

COOMBE HOSPITAL

WORK OF THE LINEN GUILD

Alderman T. Kelly, T.D., the Deputy Lord Mayor, presiding at the annual meeting of the Coombe Hospital Linen Guild yesterday, said that good housing would decrease sickness, and that the Corporation deserved high praise for their work in this respect.

The annual report, read by the Hon. Secretary, Mrs. Robert Hogan, stated that, owing to the war, large quantities of material had been purchased in advance. Much good work had been done, and many generous subscriptions received.

In proposing the adoption of the report, Canon Hayden paid tribute to the nursing and medical staffs, who had devoted their spare time to the Guild.

Mrs. MacNeill seconded the proposal, which was adopted.

Mr. P. J. Hernon, City Manager, proposing that the Linen Guild was worthy of support, said that, although the Corporation supplied free milk, dental treatment and other necessities to expectant mothers, their good work would be undone were it not for voluntary organisations such as the Guild.

The motion was seconded by Mrs. Macken, supported by Mr. T. Kingsmill Moore, K.C., and adopted.

The Master, Dr. R. M. Corbet, proposed a vote of thanks to the Deputy Lord Mayor and to the speakers, which was unanimously adopted.

PHOTOGRAPHIC SOCIETY OF IRELAND

At the annual meeting of the Photographic Society of Ireland the reports of the Secretary, Treasurer and auditors were presented, and showed that the affairs of the Society were in a very satisfactory condition. Mr. J. L. Campion, President, was in the chair.

A statement made by the Exhibition Secretary showed that the attendance was a record one, being an advance of 60 per cent. over previous years.

Mr. J. White and Mr. J. Shannon were elected auditors for 1940-41.

The presentation of the following awards were made by the President: Aikin Novices Shield and Silver Medal to P. Slattery; the Werner Silver Medal to J. W. Roch, and the Werner Bronze Medal to E. Kelly.

The election of officers and Council were as follows:—President, A. V. Henry, B.Sc.; Vice-Presidents, F. R. A. McCormick, M.A., B.Sc., A.R.P.S.; D. O'Carroll, B.A.; N. C. Stewart, F.C.A.; J. Wilson; Hon. Treasurer, O. S. Merne; Council—W. F. Aylward, A. T. Cullen, D. Crowley, M.Sc.; C. A. Jones, P. Kelly, J. W. Roch and P. E. Ryan.

The retiring President (Mr. J. L. Campion) returned thanks to the officers and Council for their help and support during the past two years, during which he held office.

The new President (Mr. A. V. Henry) was then invested with his chain of office, and, on moving to the chair, returned thanks to the members for the honour in electing him to the highest office of the Society.

The Outings Secretary announced the arrangements for the coming season, which commence on Saturday next.

PEDIGREE SHEEP-BREEDERS MEET

Mr. Harry Franks presided at a meeting of the Irish Pedigree Sheep Breeders' Association held at Ballsbridge yesterday. The following members were present:—Major W. G. Dease, Messrs. J. H. Poole, J. McS. McCulloch, R. J. Downes, G. Gordon Campbell and J. R. Ward.

The financial statement was considered satisfactory. The meeting fixed the following dates for the shows and sales:—Suffolk show and sale, August 15th; annual show and sale, August 29th; second sale, September 12th. The selection of judges for these events was left to the Secretary.

EXPORT OF SUCKING LAMBS

In our advertisement columns the Department of Agriculture draws attention to an announcement which appeared in the Press on the 16th ultimo in connection with the export of sucking lambs, and states that the British Ministry of Food has intimated that first quality well-meated lambs only are wanted. Exporters are, therefore, again advised not to ship lean or light-weight immature lambs, as such lambs are liable to be classified as "rejects" or "unthrifty lambs," and paid for at corresponding prices.

GOOD STANDARD IN JUMPING

JUDGES' DECISIONS APPRECIATED

A NUMBER OF FINE PERFORMANCES

On numerous occasions in the past many in the stands in the jumping enclosure must have found themselves in complete disagreement with the judges regarding the merits of competitors. There have been occasions on which we were surprised when horses, after "faultless displays," who "never put an iron astray," were among the "also competed" when the numbers of the prize-winners were hoisted in the frame. But now all and sundry were given a lesson—a much-needed one, as it turned out—in judging, and one that, we are certain, was thoroughly appreciated by the spectators.

An innovation was introduced by way of a running commentary. At the close of the competition the commentator expressed the hope that the onlookers were pleased with it, and added that the Council would like to have their views and opinions on postcards.

The commentator began by explaining the system adopted by the judges in the allocation of points—a competitor could score one fault on a round, or he could be adjudged guilty of even a dozen at one jump. Then as each horse cleared an obstacle he announced the extent of its blunders (if any)—one, two, four, or eight, as the case might be. It was news to some that a fall meant as many as eight faults.

And to demonstrate how the onlooker could be very much out in his reckoning he announced that a certain competitor had incurred a black mark by going too fast. The spectators, when the animal completed the circuit, applauded heartily, but they were mistaken. That "almost faultless" round was marred by the horse going too fast; he should have gone round at a fair hunting pace. As a matter of fact, he did not come back again. Again, Mr. John Bamber's Prudence, who first round was flawless, had only two faults the second time. She was brilliant—really brilliant, as the commentator remarked—at the single and double banks, and generally her displays were high class; but the third time at the wall she bungled badly, and that relegated her to third place, as the judges had to take into account the total points lost at that one fence and ignore everything else. It was most interesting and most instructive, and the result of the experiment cannot be in doubt.

A GOOD STANDARD

For novices the jumping was of a good standard. On the first round Brown Sugar, Prudence and Lightfoot—each owned by Mr. John Bamber, of Ballymena—were the only competitors who had not a fault; Mr. R. Craigie's Cherry Bough, Mr. David Collen's Nora, the same owner's My Owen and Mrs. Lanigan-O'Keeffe's Merry Point were next best. Brown Sugar, Prudence and Lightfoot were really splendid, but when they came out for the second round Brown Sugar had two faults at the double, Prudence lost a couple of marks at the gate, and Lightfood one, whilst Cherry Bough knocked the gate off its hinges. Nora had full marks, as had Merry Point. Then came the crucial test. On the third circuit Brown Sugar lost two at the wall, Nora fell a further six points behind at the wall (2) and gate (4), Prudence, as remarked, was bad at the wall, and Lightfoot had only one fault at the fence. The result was:—

COMPETITION A—For horses that have not won a prize for jumping at any previous show of the Society (inter-Hunt excepted). £25, £15, £10, £5.

Mr. John Bamber's LIGHTFOOT (two faults) Mr. John Bamber, jun. 1

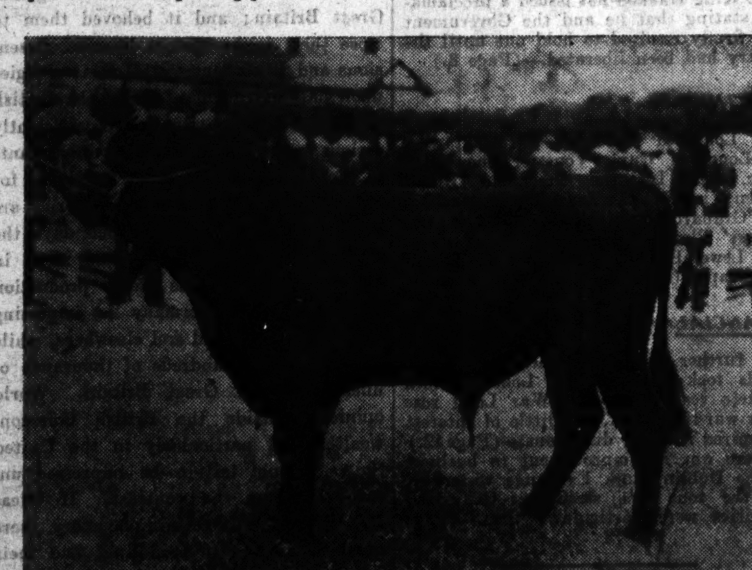

Mr. John Bamber's BROWN SUGAR (four faults) Mr. M. Bamber 2

Mr John Bamber's PRUDENCE (six faults) Mr. J. Bamber, jun. 3

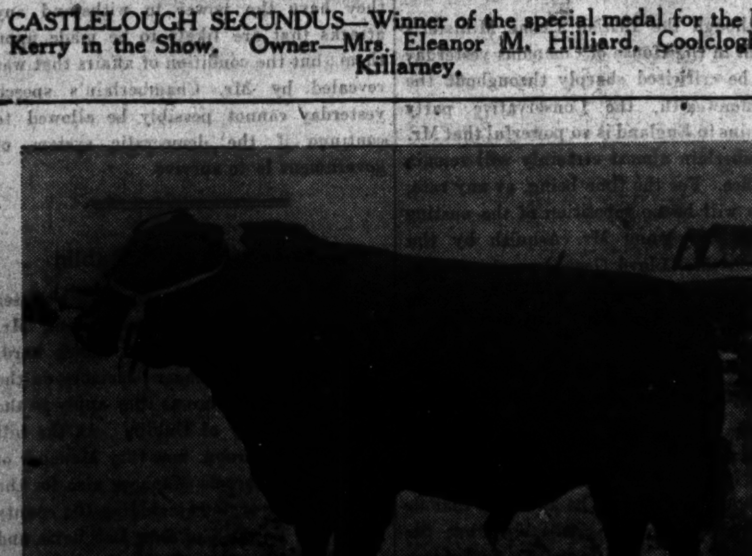

Mr. D. Collins's NORA (eight faults) Mr. W. Gilmore 4

Also competed:—Miss S. Meyers's Red Queen, Senator W. Quirke's Pep, Mr. W. L. Sweetnam's Umbrella Man; Mrs. R. Lanigan-O'Keeffe's Merry Point; Miss Y. Devine's Ruskey, Miss M. L. Moore's Rob Roy, Lieut. T. M. Banahan's Battery Column, Mr. D. McCreedy Snow White, Mr. R. Craigie's Cherry Bough, Lady Athlumney's The Masher, Miss S. White's Sir James, Lieut. M. H. Bell's Rainbow Chaser, Miss S. Meyers's Hotspur, Mons. E. Lestocquoy's Saccharose, Miss L. Fox's Pal o' Mine, Mr. D. Collen's My Own, Mr. R. E. Tyner's Robin Darling, Mr. D. L. Moore's Cork Accent, Mr. M. P. Giles's Leanamore.

By way of contrast, a gymkhana event (musical chairs) followed. It was a very amusing affair, and was won by Miss P. Hone, Mr. Robert Craigie being second.

HEREFORD SOCIETY MEETS

Captain S. F. Purdon presided at a meeting of the Irish Hereford Breeders' Society held at Ballsbridge yesterday. Messrs. R. Purdon and W. Bagwell were elected members of the committee. A grant of £10 was voted towards prizes in the Hereford classes at the Munster Society's Summer Show in Cork.

Mr. J. S. Gibson was appointed judge for the Dublin Christmas Fat Stock Show, and Wednesday, September 25th, was set aside for the annual sale of pedigree cattle in Dublin.

Mr. J. Good, Ballintubber, Carrigtwohill; Mr. E. R. Purdon, Freshford, and Mr. H. Holloway, Horseleap, were elected members.

SHORTHORN BREEDERS

The Irish Shorthorn Breeders' Society, at a meeting in Ballsbridge yesterday, decided not to participate in a proposed organisation aiming at the unity of all farming associations in Eire into one body. The meeting, at which Mr. P. Doyle (Enniscorthy) presided, decided to hold the next congress of Cow-testing Associations in Mallow in January, 1941. It was decided to request the Minister for Agriculture to intensify the campaign for the stamping out of contagious abortion.

The Irish Times

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1940.

NEWS SUMMARY

IRELAND

A reward of £5,000 has been offered by the Government for information leading to the arrest of the gunmen who wounded two Dublin detectives in a busy street yesterday.—(Page 7.)

There was a slight improvement in the attendance at the opening day of the Spring Show as compared with last year. Farmers' day is essentially a business day, and good business was done.—(Page 7.)

GREAT BRITAIN

Mr. George Lansbury, M.P., died last night in Manor House Hospital, London, aged 81.—(Page 13.)

Replying to his critics in the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain revealed that an urgent appeal that the Allies should attack Trondheim was made by the Norwegians. The German losses in warships, 'planes, transports and men were far heavier than the British losses.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD

Berlin claims the "pacification" of Central and Southern Norway. Meanwhile King Haakon has issued a proclamation stating that he and the Government were firmly resolved to hold out until the country had been liberated.—(Page 8.)

SPORTING

At Longford yesterday Sarawaki won the Longford Cup, Vonester the Trial Plate, Sen Toi the Greenfield Plate, Golden View II. the Town Plate, Macidas the Granard Cup, and Jackbook the Stayers' Plate.—(Page 10.)

At Lewes Poetic Licence won the Spring Handicap.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL

A further strong advance in British Funds took place in the London Stock Markets yesterday. Old War Loan rose to its war-time peak, but little of interest transpired in other directions.—(Page 12.)

There was no improvement in business on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, but the tone was steadier. Gilt-edged securities were particularly firm.—(Page 12.)

Democracy on Trial

Although the British Prime Minister's speech in the House of Commons yesterday will be criticised sharply throughout the Commonwealth, the Conservative party machine in England is so powerful that Mr. Chamberlain almost certainly will remain in office. For the time being, at any rate, there will be no repetition of the ousting of the easy-going Mr. Asquith by the vigorous Mr. Lloyd George nearly twenty-five years ago; and, for better or for worse, the present Government will continue to be responsible for the waging of the war. Mr. Chamberlain is a good parliamentarian. He knows the peculiar ways of the House of Commons, and is never better than when he is defending a bad case. Yesterday he was on the defensive all the time. It must be admitted that he survived his ordeal creditably; but Sir Roger Keyes, the hero of Zeebrugge, described his speech as "a shocking story of ineptitude," and there can be doubt at all that the whole Norwegian business was bungled badly. Mr. Chamberlain paid a high tribute to the courage of the little British force that had been exposed to the full strength of vastly superior German attackers on land, as well as in the air. The skill with which the withdrawal from Namsos was carried out was remarkable. The operation was completed in a single night without the loss of a man. On the following morning the Germans, having discovered what had happened, sent fifty aeroplanes in pursuit of the convoyed troopships; and Mr. Chamberlain declared that the Allies were fortunate to lose only one British and one French destroyer. Public opinion all over the British Commonwealth will be surprised to learn from the Prime Minister that the strength of the Norwegian Expeditionary Force was not more than a division. According to members of the Opposition it was badly equipped, and was forced to fight, as it were, with its hands tied behind its back. Mr. Chamberlain admitted that British equipment was inferior to that of the Germans in Norway, while asserting that, man for man, the British force was better. Be that as it may, the Trondheim adventure must be written off as a loss, the gravity of which no amount of special pleading can reduce.

Mr. Chamberlain did not try to conceal the fact that the British had "suffered a certain loss of prestige"; that colour had been given to "the false legend of Germany's invincibility on land"; that "some discouragement had been caused to our friends," and that the Germans were crowing. He complained that false hopes had been aroused among the British people by false reports that had originated in Sweden, and probably had been invented by the Germans; but these reports were passed for publication by the British Censorship, which, therefore, must accept some of the blame. It is manifest that something is wrong with the conduct of the war by the British authorities. Sir Roger Keyes declared that "wars cannot be won by committees"; and experience is proving him to be right, although, according to the Prime Minister, both Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Hankey, who were connected with Mr. Lloyd George's Government, agree that nothing would be gained by a reduction in the size of the present War Cabinet. Nevertheless, Mr. Chamberlain seems to have made some small concession to his critics. He told the House of Commons that Mr. Churchill had been endowed by the Cabinet with increased powers. He had been authorised to give "guidance and direction" to the Chiefs of Staffs' Committee, and would have a small personal staff under Major-General Ismay. Mr. Churchill would continue to have important work to do at the Admiralty; but, if he should find his duties too onerous, steps would be taken to relieve him. It would appear, therefore, as if the active conduct of the war were to be left largely in Mr. Churchill's hands, subject, of course, to the over-riding authority of the Cabinet. A few weeks ago the news of this change would have caused rejoicing throughout the British Empire—indeed, throughout the whole democratic world; but it must be remembered that, in his capacity as First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Churchill cannot escape some responsibility for the Norwegian fiasco. Undoubtedly, he is the most vigorous member of Mr. Chamberlain's Government; but there is a growing feeling that he is the best of an indifferent lot.

Public criticism of government is one of the privileges of a democracy; and, however much other nations may jeer at the British system, the debate in the House of Commons cannot but do ultimate good. For one thing, it will throw into high relief whatever weaknesses may exist within the ranks of the Administration; for another, it will shake the British people out of the complacency which hitherto seems to have been the keynote of their attitude towards the war. Until the withdrawal from Norway it never seems to have struck anybody in Great Britain that the Allies conceivably might be defeated. "I do not think," said the Prime Minister yesterday, "that the people of this country yet realise the extent, or the imminence, of the threat that is impending against us." Presently, he added, the British people might be faced with war in its most violent form, directed against Great Britain; and it behoved them to close their ranks against internal dissensions and to concentrate all their energies upon national defence. From the British point of view, the situation is sufficiently serious. At a time when the inhabitants of the United Kingdom are preparing for the Whitsun holidays, and factories are about to be closed down for some days, the Germans are working day and night in an effort to increase their production of armaments. Germany is importing workers from Poland and elsewhere, while there still are hundreds of thousands of unemployed in Great Britain. World opinion, outside the British Commonwealth, and particularly in the United States, cannot fail to be impressed unfavourably by the contrast. If Great Britain is to make certain of victory, there must be an end to muddling, and their people must realise that they are fighting for their existence. Nobody doubts that they have the power to withstand any attacks that are likely to be made upon them; but the condition of affairs that was revealed by Mr. Chamberlain's speech yesterday cannot possibly be allowed to continue if the democratic system of government is to survive.

Foundations for Dublin

If the County Management Bill passes the Oireachtas in its present form, Mr. P. J. Hernon will earn his money hard. Let us refresh our readers' memory on the terms of this measure as they apply to the City and County of Dublin. As the bill stands, Mr. Hernon, now City Manager of Dublin, will become Manager also for the entire county region, including the county itself, the Borough of Dun Laoghaire and the Urban District of Howth. He will delegate part of his authority, however, to two Assistant Managers, one of whom will be the present Borough Manager of Dun Laoghaire, and the other, in all probability, the present Secretary of the County Council. It is not yet clear what the functions of these Assistant Managers will be. Will each be responsible exclusively for his present bailiwick—subject to Mr. Hernon's higher authority—when the new scheme comes into effect, or will they help him to manage the affairs of the entire region? That is one question which, presumably, will be decided when the bill enters its committee stage in the Senate. Yet we think that the Senate would do better to forget about it, to scrap the section which makes this arrangement, and to replace it by a new provision altogether. Surely the efficient administration of the City and County of Dublin—a region that contains over a sixth of the country's population—demands the services of more than three managers. Consider their difficulties. The Act does not interfere with the present constitution of the local bodies. The total area is governed by four local authorities: the Corporation of Dublin, the County Council, the Borough Council of Dun Laoghaire, and the Howth Urban Council, in addition to which are three public assistance bodies—those of Dublin, Rathdown and Balrothery; and the seven are separate and independent authorities. Amid these conflicting counsels, how are the Manager and his two assistants to keep their heads? They will be the servants of seven bodies, often at variance with one another. No man can serve two masters; how much less can Mr. Hernon and his two assistants hope to serve seven with the efficiency that so complex an organism as Dublin demands?

Something better than the present scheme in the bill is needed, and something better was urged by our correspondent, "Civis," yesterday. Mr. Hernon requires not two, but four, Assistant Managers, with clearly defined functions. One ought to be, as it were, Chief Engineer, in charge of planning, roads, sewers, water supply, housing, and other major works of construction. The second ought to be Chief Medical Officer of Health, controlling public health, hospital and dispensary services. The third would have Public Assistance for his province; he would handle outdoor and indoor relief, with other forms of public assistance. The fourth would be in charge of the remaining services, and, in addition, would assume the duties of Town Clerk. Over all, co-ordinating their efforts and planning on the widest scale, would be the Metropolitan Manager, Mr. P. J. Hernon. Anyone can see how this scheme improves upon the Government's. Instead of three tormented officials, trying to manipulate a dozen important services at the beck and call of seven distinct authorities, there would be five, every one a specialist in his particular department. The Assistant Manager for Public Health—or Metropolitan M.O.H., if we care to call him so—would be in an infinitely better position to handle and correlate the work of public health throughout the whole region; and the other services likewise would be rendered workable and harmonious. This is—with certain differences—the scheme of management which was recommended by the Greater Dublin Tribunal two and a half years ago. If the Tribunal's scheme had been adopted by the Government, there would be no need of "Civis's" proposals—indeed, there would have been no necessity to apply the County Management Bill to Dublin at all. The Government, however, seems to have discarded the Tribunal's plan for the present—regrettably, in our opinion—and, for a while at least, the region must maintain its multiplicity of local authorities. We suggest that "Civis's" plan will serve as a useful alternative. It will provide a real and solid foundation for the building of a Greater Dublin when the time comes.

In the Swim

The sad plight of a crowd of juvenile fish aroused the concern of the Cork Board of Fishery Conservators at its recent meeting. Young and unsophisticated, utterly ignorant of the world and its ways, the fry knew no better than to take up residence in the local baths. Far be it from us to suggest that the baths are not all that they should be—a pride and joy to the citizens—but it must be admitted that they are not the sort of place where young fish can be brought up to the best advantage. They may enjoy facilities in the Cork Baths that would be denied to them in Dublin, either in Tara street or in the Iveagh swimming ponds, but the fact remains that the baths were designed for the natatory enjoyment of bipeds; and, partial though we may be to fish on the menu, we object to being crowded by them in our bath. We can imagine few things more likely to put a swimmer off his stroke than to find his mouth invaded by immature fish when he is practising the crawl or the over-arm stroke, or to discover the little fellows playing leap frog over his face when exercising all the muscles by swimming on the back. Matters, of course, would become more complicated when the fry developed into lusty adult fish, but our own opinion is that few of them would survive the ordeal of bathing daily with homo sapiens, either in Cork, Dublin or Belfast. This opinion is confirmed by the Clerk to the Cork Board of Conservators, who said that, if the fry were not got out, they were likely to lose a lot of them. Even the fact that the survivors grew up with a Cork accent would not compensate for the loss of the majority. The Chairman, however, felt certain that, when the baths were being cleaned out, the fry would be able to escape through the outlet pipes, and, if this is so, it may be hoped, in the interests of all concerned, including the wee fish, that the operation will not be delayed. Of course, things might be worse; we infer that the fry in the Cork Baths belong to the bricini class, but instead of being mild-mannered little trout they could have been aggressive young eels or malevolent crabs, and painful scenes might have been witnessed when they grew big enough to register disapproval of the Cork swimmers. Being stung by a jellyfish in the open sea is bad enough, but it is much preferable to being mobbed by eels or savaged by crabs in a swimming pond. We are glad to know that such a possibility is as remote in Cork as the invasion of the baths at Clontarf, Blackrock or Dun Laoghaire by a covey of sea serpents. Should any of the Cork swimmers mourn the loss of their little playmates when the fry all have been evacuated in due course, via the waste pipes, we can only express the wish that they may be happily reunited at some point around the coast during the summer bathing season. In the meantime, the Cork Baths emerge from the ordeal without a single scale on their escutcheon.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S CASE

The Times remarks editorially to-day:—The Prime Minister's explanation of the course of the campaign in Norway follows lines that had been largely anticipated, and defends the supreme direction of operations to the fullest extent that seems possible.

After observing that the decision to withdraw the troops when it became clear that their objective was unattainable was undoubtedly wise, and it was notable that no Opposition speaker attempted to challenge it, The Times proceeds: Nevertheless, the episode, although the Germans have paid heavily in men and ships for their great gain of territory, remains a conspicuous reverse for the Allies. The impression left of a tame ineffectiveness in the direction of the war is painfully obvious in neutral countries, and has here some substantial evidence to support it, as Sir Roger Keyes showed in his devastating speech. Mr. Chamberlain very properly reminded the House of a dominating factor in the whole war—Germany's central situation, and the consequent necessity of our being prepared to cope with a conflagration that may blaze up suddenly in any of several different quarters. It must be added, however, that the experience of the past month has not encouraged confidence in the thoroughness of our preparations to meet such emergencies.

The expedition against Trondheim failed because it could obtain no base for fighter aircraft to protect the landing of its heavy armament. There is as yet little evidence to show that this most urgent need had been thoroughly studied in advance or that swifter action, with expert collaboration from the Royal Air Force, might not have succeeded in providing for it. Many more criticisms of this kind the Government will have to face. They all come down to this—in war it is not sufficient to follow a routine that will supply some sort of answer to any move the enemy may make. What is required is the intense alertness of the fencer, whose ripostes must be ready before the thrust is made. That has not been the temper of our conduct of the war in Norway.

Mr. Chamberlain thought it necessary to warn the people of this country that they do not yet realise the extent or the imminence of the threat which is impending against us. The people are, in fact, very well aware that they face a threat that has not been paralleled in centuries, not even twenty-five years ago. They are absolutely resolute to face whatever may befall, and their most oppressive doubt is whether their rulers are so conscious of the danger, and so energetic to withstand it, as themselves. They will whole-heartedly second Mr. Chamberlain's declaration that we have to occupy ourselves with increasing our war effort, but when he goes on to say that this is more important than disputing about the form of government, they may think that he has entirely misunderstood the very serious criticisms that have been made.

TO-DAY'S ENGAGEMENTS ON PAGE 13.

LONDON LETTER

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S RECEPTION

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

AT 11 o'clock this morning people began to assemble in the neighbourhood of Downing street and the Houses of Parliament to await the arrival of Mr. Chamberlain and other members who were to take part in the debate on Norway. Mr. Chamberlain and other Ministers were cheered as they passed into Palace Yard in the afternoon. The House was crowded when the Speaker took the chair, every seat on the floor and in the galleries being occupied. The Ambassadors of France, the United States, Belgium, Russia, Japan, Brazil, Egypt, and Argentina were present, with Professor Koht, the Norwegian Foreign Minister, and the Rumanian, Dutch and Swedish Ministers. Mr. Chamberlain entered during question-hour. He was welcomed warmly by the Government benches, but from the Opposition came cries of "Who Missed the 'Bus?" Conservatives resented this, and for a moment there were indications of an angry scene, but a glance from the Speaker restored order. There were some interruptions, however, while Mr. Chamberlain was speaking, and the Speaker had to intervene more than once.

What Will Italy Do?

While there is no official intimation of any kind regarding the situation in Rome, Britain is anxious to know whether Italy prefers to remain a neutral or to become a belligerent. The present condition of affairs is held to be unsatisfactory. At the moment it would seem that Italy is heading straight for war. The Government Press attacks on Britain are more virulent than ever. The German Minister of Communications (Herr Julius Durpmuller) was expected to arrive in Rome to-night to meet leading members of the Italian transport and commercial bodies and high Government officials in accordance with the general policy of strengthening the Rome-Berlin axis. It is expected that the situation will become clear in the course of the next few days, and the possibility is that Italy will maintain her present state of neutrality. There is no truth in the report that the British Government has instructed Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador in Rome, to ask the Italian Government to define its position.

Italian Royal Visit to the Pope

The diplomatic world is busily discussing yesterday's visit of the Crown Prince and Princess of Italy to the Pope, especially as it has been understood that the Prince never has been particularly friendly with Signor Mussolini and his entourage. When last summer matters were strained between France and Italy, and it was thought that Italy contemplated war, it was stated definitely that the Prince would go to live in Belgium, the idea being that he did not wish to be associated with a possible downfall of the Mussolini régime, which was regarded as an almost certain consequence if Italy engaged in war. To-day it is reported that the Prince had a long consultation with Signor Mussolini on Italy's preparedness for war.

General Weygand

Present developments in the Mediterranean are being watched closely by General Weygand. A colleague who interviewed him recently in Beirut tells me the General is not likely to be caught napping. The General said that he was prepared for surprises, and he spoke of aeroplanes and other methods for swift transport of the troops of his command. General Weygand does not like all the stories circulated about his "unlimited authority." Far from being "uncrowned King of the Orient," as some Arab writers flatteringly allege, he will have no title but his official one, which is "Chef de l'Armée en Syrie." Nevertheless, his popularity among the Arabs is remarkable. They wait for hours at a railway station on the chance of seeing his train go through, and when he attends a race meeting at Beirut his welcome rather resembles that of a popular monarch than of the General of what virtually is an Army of Occupation.

The Purchase Tax

Sir John Simon is to discuss the purchase tax with the London Chamber of Commerce, several members having asked that points at present somewhat doubtful shall be clarified. Sir John is anxious to obtain the views of the Chamber before he fixes the percentage and details of the tax. In the meantime many firms, both wholesale and retail, which usually hold large stocks of goods, point out that, while the tax upon such stocks will have to be paid in a specified sum, and more or less within a specified time, sales probably will be so reduced that it may be a long time before they can be recouped. In effect, the argument is that wholesalers will be deprived of interest on their money unless they can charge the retailer with something in excess of the tax.

Many other questions have arisen on the operation of the tax, and there will be lengthy discussions before it assumes its final shape. One of the problems relates to goods which are subject to hire-purchase agreement. Transactions involving millions of pounds a year are affected, and it is suggested that the goods are not actually sold until the final payment has been made, which may be some years after they have been delivered to the purchasers. Difficulties have arisen with regard to the interpretation of this provision, particularly in the case of manufacturers who deal directly with individual purchasers, so that the goods in that case do not pass through the hands of wholesalers at all.

On Submarines

The new "Brassey's Naval Annual" gives an illuminating chapter, "The Submarine Campaign," in which Commander H. Pursey, R.N., shows how the Germans over-estimated the capabilities of the U-boat and under-estimated the efficiency of anti-submarine measures. The commander holds that there has been no outstanding improvement in submarines in the past twenty years or so. On the other hand, the invention of a successful detection apparatus—the Asdic—is the most important development since the Great War in the warfare against submarines. Once a submarine can be found, secrecy—its greatest asset—is nullified by the detector.

25 YEARS AGO

From the Irish Times, 8th May, 1915.

Lusitania Torpedoed.

The giant liner, Lusitania (31,580 tons), was torpedoed and sunk at 2.33 p.m. yesterday eight miles south by west of Kinsale. She was on the passage from New York, and had over 1,900 passengers on board. It is believed that nearly 1,300 lives have been lost. Two torpedoes struck the steamer on her starboard side and caused a great explosion. Survivors state that she sank in eight minutes.

The survivors say that the disaster came with terrible suddenness. After the explosions the vessel took a great list to starboard, making it impossible to launch many lifeboats, and with her stern jutting up high into the air the great ship slowly sank.

At Queenstown.

Between 500 and 600 passengers had been landed at Queenstown up to darkness last night, many seriously injured, and many have since died.

Our Queenstown correspondent telegraphed at 3 o'clock this morning: "More than a hundred dead bodies have now been landed. The Cunard stores are filled. The Town Clerk is at the Town Hall receiving sixty bodies there. It is a most appalling and ghastly spectacle."

SPRING SHOW'S SPLENDID OPENING

ATTENDANCE BETTER THAN LAST YEAR

By a Special Representative.

WITHIN recent years the "flight from the land" has attracted considerable attention from public men throughout the country; during the same period there has been a noticeable development of the industrial side of the Royal Dublin Society's Spring Show in contrast to the purely agricultural side.

When the show opened at Ballsbridge yesterday, however, it was interesting to notice that, although the number of entries in the stock classes showed a slight decline on last year, there appeared to be a keener appreciation of the show's primary purpose—the development of agriculture. Industrial exhibits were as strong as ever, but the main interest of the visitors was centred on the judging and on the very wide range of agricultural machinery on view.

An encouraging feature, too, was the large number of young men—obviously farmers' sons—who were taking an interest in agricultural implements and in the educational exhibit of the Department of Agriculture. I visited the exhibit with some of these youths, and found them eager in their quest for knowledge from the officials; and the officials were more than willing to help them. Surely this is an indication that, by proper training of the young, the flight from the land can be checked.

FOOD

People who read Department of Agriculture notices in the newspaper sometimes find them rather dry; in the Sandymount Hall they will see these notices translated into terms of food and how to produce it. The importance of conserving animal feeding-stuffs is shown, together with demonstrations as to how it should be done. Our growing seed potato trade is revealed by wall charts, which show that exports of seed potatoes have risen from 140 tons in 1925 to 28,684 tons last year. Land reclamation, pure milk production and fruit-growing are other features of the exhibit, which is not alone for farmers, but for the ordinary man who has a little piece of a back garden. To-day everyone must grow food, and the Department of Agriculture shows us how it can be done on our own "back lots."

There was just one sign of the Government economy campaign in the Sandymount Hall—the usual stand of free leaflets was missing. Those leaflets were far too tempting for small boys.

POINTS

A watery sun in the early morning disappeared behind the clouds before noon, a chilly breeze ruffled the spring green of the well-trimmed trees as we stood around the judging rings, and watched the experts as they summed up the points of the animals that came before them. And, needless to remark, there were the usual "hurlers on the ditch" to comment on the judges' decisions.

The first day of the Show is never the day for the general public: it is "Farmers' Day"—the day for the men who form the country's backbone—and, therefore, the crowd was not unduly large. But it was an intelligent crowd—a crowd that went to see, rather than be seen.

Agricultural equipment crowded the big machinery paddock, but in the halls one found other evidences of the progress of Irish industry. The stands showed how Irish enterprise has met the needs of the people in many new directions within a comparatively short space of time. These stands, too, showed that real imagination is being used by industrial and commercial firms in the display of their produce. Modern salesmanship is an art which requires study, and there is plenty of evidence at Ballsbridge that the knowledge of how to present wares attractively is being learnt in this country—but some people still have a great deal to learn!

One novel feature amongst the stands was the advertising of an Irish seaside resort, not merely through the Irish Tourist Association. Local people at Tramore have banded together, and the result is an attractive stand which should do much to popularise this resort.

DUCKS

Each year the R.D.S. seeks to introduce "something new," and this time it has presented an interesting display of shepherding ducks with the aid of sheep dog: it was a clever display, which added to the interest of the demonstration of sheep driving and penning during the early afternoon. Other new features include the gymkhana events, which are taking place each afternoon. Yesterday there were eighteen entrants for the musical chairs, and they provided good entertainment for the crowd as well as good sport for themselves. The United Kingdom representative to Eire and Lady Maffey, as well as the Minister for Industry and Commerce (Mr. Sean MacEntee) were among the crowd which watched the events in the Jumping Enclosure during the afternoon.

The exhibition of Irish crafts, which fills the Members' Hall, is as interesting as ever; all the usual crafts are represented, and it was good to see that young men—apparently apprentices—were working with the older craftsmen. It is an indication that these fine old crafts will not be allowed to die out. Another good sight was the number of "sold" tickets on the many lengths of Irish tweed which were exhibited.

One day is insufficient for anyone who wants to "do" the Spring Show properly, and as yesterday ended one found oneself with still many points of interest unvisited; we must go again to-day.

GERMAN RADIO PIONEER DEAD

BERLIN, Tuesday.

Dr. Georg von Arco, one of the pioneers of wireless, and "creator" of the well-known German radio station at Nauen, near Berlin, died here to-day, aged seventy-one years. He was the inventor of several improvements in high frequency machines for wireless telephony and telegraphy, and has been a director of the big German wireless concern, Telefunken, since 1903.

THE TRONDHEIM AFFAIR

Mr. Chamberlain Tells the Story in Commons

NORWEGIANS CALLED FOR THE ATTACK

MR. CHAMBERLAIN revealed, in the House of Commons last night, that an urgent appeal that the Allies should attack Trondheim was made by the Norwegians.

The withdrawal, he said, was not comparable with Gallipoli. Not more than a division of troops was involved; their losses were not numerous, and no considerable amount of stores was left behind.

The Premier declared that he did not think the people of Britain yet realised the extent or the imminence of Hitler's threat, and made an appeal for "no bickerings and divisions" among themselves.

Mr. Churchill's new duty, the Premier announced, will be to give guidance and direction to the Chiefs of Staff Committee when they prepare plans laid down by him, and will see that policies decided upon are "followed up with promptness and energy."

Mr. Attlee, leader of the Opposition, declared that there was widespread anxiety in the country, where everywhere the story was "too late!" In this life-and-death struggle they could not afford to leave their destinies in the hands of failures, or men who needed a rest.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal Opposition, said that something had happened which suggested that more foresight and energy, and more ruthless will to victory, was required to direct their war effort.

Sir Roger Keyes described the Trondheim landing as a shocking story of ineptitude, which ought never to have been allowed to happen if proper steps had been taken and carried out with resolution and heed.

As Mr. Chamberlain entered the Chamber there was an outburst of cheering, amid which could be faintly heard a cry of "Resign" and "The man who missed the 'bus." Mr. Chamberlain smiled composedly.

It was stated last night in London that Labour had decided not to move a vote of censure.

MR. CHURCHILL NOW BECOMES WAR CHIEF

Recalling that he had to observe a certain reticence when speaking on Thursday, Mr. Chamberlain said he was anxious to give no hint of the intending withdrawal from Namsos, which was bound to be more dangerous than that from Aandalsnes, because of the larger number of men involved, and because the Germans could bring their full available bomber force to bear.

He paid tribute to the "really remarkable skill of our naval and military forces who managed to effect this withdrawal in the course of one single, short night, without suffering any loss in the operation."

The danger was illustrated by the fact that early the following morning the Germans discovered the troops returning in their ships and sent some fifty bombers to bomb the convoy. As the convoy was outside the range of the fighters, and they had to depend on the anti-aircraft fire of the ships, they could count themselves fortunate that they had lost only one British and one French destroyer.

SPLENDID GALLANTRY

Whoever else might be criticised, they would agree that their troops carried out their task with magnificent gallantry. Opposed as they were to superior forces and superior equipment, they distinguished themselves in every respect, and man for man showed themselves superior to their foes. He added: "A word of pride and admiration for the splendid gallantry and dash of the officers and men of the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force."

Mr. Chamberlain suggested that it was reports emanating from Stockholm, probably invented by the enemy, which aroused expectations never justified and never endorsed by any Minister.

Numerous Opposition interruptions at this point caused the speaker to appeal for order.

"FALSE LEGEND"

Mr. Chamberlain said they did their best to damp down these unfounded reports, but had to be careful not to give the enemy a hint of the true situation.

"I do not wish to extenuate anything; at the same time, I hope we shall not exaggerate the extent or the importance of the check which we have received."

He was aware that results were not to be measured merely in losses on the spot.

"We have to take account of the fact that we have suffered a certain loss of prestige, that a certain colour has been given to the false legend of the German invincibility on land, that some discouragement has been caused to our friends, that our enemies are crowing.

"Well, we must accept that position at the moment. We need not help our enemies by making it worse."

REACTION IN SWEDEN

For reasons he fully appreciated, the reaction had been most serious in Sweden. He regretted certain opinions of a polemical character in the Swedish Press, which did not help Sweden or the Allied cause. If the Swedish Government and people decided for a policy of neutrality in the face of pressure, he trusted it would be strictly impartial as between the belligerents.

Mr. Chamberlain then explained why the Trondheim expedition was attempted in face of the dangers which they fully realised.

They had, he said, to consider the effect on the Norwegians if they made no attempt to hold Central Norway.

NORWAY'S CALL

WHY IT WAS ANSWERED

"We received the most urgent and repeated appeals from the Norwegian Commander-in-Chief to attack Trondheim at all costs, a place essential to the Government for the port and as a seat for the Government and the King."

"It was made clear to us that, unless we were ready to assist in the only way which the Norwegians themselves felt to be effective—namely, by an attack on Trondheim—the Norwegians were not likely to be able to continue their resistance, and the whole country would have fallen at once into Germany's hands.

"We felt that we must do our best to help a small people, who had the courage to stand up to the German bully and make an effort to save their freedom."

He did not believe anyone present would have done otherwise.

"If we had refused to answer this call, we would have justified the reproach that our only objective in Scandinavia was the iron ore in Sweden, and that we cared nothing for the freedom of small nations.

THE DIRECT ATTACK

Experts would differ on whether a direct attack should have been made on Trondheim. Since the operation was not tried its merits could not be finally decided. For a while it seemed as if the capture of Trondheim might be effected by the forces landed elsewhere.

It was supposed that German reinforcements would be delayed by the blowing up of railway bridges and the destruction of two roads leading up the two valleys from Oslo. In that they were disappointed. No demolitions were made in time to delay the Germans except a couple of bridges blown up by a British party.

Referring to the contention that the Anglo-Finnish force should not have been dispersed, Mr. Chamberlain said that the rate of despatch of troops to Norway was not governed by the availability of troops in this country, but by the speed with which they could be landed at the very few and inadequate ports of entry open to them.

GERMANY'S HEAVY PRICE

"CAMPAIGN NOT YET OVER"

The Germans had made certain gains for which they had paid a heavy price. It was too early to say on which side the balance would finally incline.

"The campaign is not yet finished. A large part of Norway is not in German hands. The King and the Government are still on Norwegian soil, and they will rally around them the remainder of the Norwegian forces to carry on the fight against the invader, in which we shall be on their side."

Referring to the repetition of his phrase, that Hitler had missed the 'bus, Mr. Chamberlain recalled that it was made three days before the invasion of Norway, and was merely a commentary upon the past.

"While I think the implications of the Norwegian campaign have been seriously exaggerated, and while I retain my complete confidence in our ultimate victory—(cheers)—I am bound to say I do not think the people of this country yet realise the extent or the imminence of the threat that is impending against us."

NO TIME FOR BICKERING

There were useful lessons they could learn. The experience of Norway showed how swiftly the scene altered in the rapid exchanges of war.

"Let us beware of being tempted into such a dispersal of our forces as might suit the purpose of the enemy. Let us beware also of bickerings and divisions among ourselves.

"When presently we may be faced by war in its most violent form directed against this country in the hope of wrecking its courage and will-power, there is no time for quarrels among ourselves.

"It is rather the time for closing our ranks, for setting our teeth, for all of us endeavouring to put every ounce of strength, our united resources into every weapon that will help us win."

DISSENSION DENIED

Mr. Chamberlain disclosed that the Government's military advisers had warned them of the dangers of a debate, and urged that there should not be one, but, he said, in a democratic country there must be criticism, and those criticised must be allowed to defend themselves.

Suggestions that one Minister or another was more responsible for a course of action were as unworthy as they were untrue.

"There is no division among us; none of us has attempted intrigue against any other."

Alluding to the demands for a smaller

WHAT WILL ITALY DO?

Mussolini to Speak To-morrow

POPE MAY MOVE FOR PEACE

By Associated Press.

ROME, Tuesday.

ITALY'S position in the face of Allied naval concentration in the Mediterranean is likely to be clarified publicly by Signor Mussolini on Thursday. It was considered almost certain that Mussolini would speak briefly when he reviews troops of the Rome garrison at the celebrations of "Army Day" on May 9th, the fourth anniversary of the founding of the Italian Empire after the conquest of Ethiopia.

A high Fascist official described as "ridiculous," however, a report that Britain had asked Il Duce to define his position by May 16th. Competent Italian and British sources in direct contact with both Governments said that nothing was known in Rome of any such request. Some added that it was most unlikely that Britain and France would attempt to force Mussolini's hand, since that would be contrary to their policy, which has hitherto been aimed at keeping Italy out of the war.

It was considered possible that the British Ambassador would see Count Ciano (Mussolini's Foreign Minister) soon. Signor Mussolini was believed to have heard again from Crown Prince Umberto, who visited the Pope yesterday, of the Pontiff's hope that Italy would be spared from participation in hostilities. Il Duce received the Crown Prince shortly after the Papal audience, ostensibly to talk about military matters. Vatican authorities to-day indicated that His Holiness still sees little chance of an early peace.

POPE AND PEACE

From Reuter's Correspondent.

ROME, Tuesday.

Speculation around a crop of rumours produced an interesting pot-pourri in diplomatic and journalistic circles in Rome to-day. No confirmation of any of them was forthcoming from any responsible quarter. They began yesterday evening with a report that Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, saw Count Ciano. To-day he is said to have seen both Count Ciano and Signor Mussolini, though this is not definitely known.

Rumour also credited the Pope with conveying to Signor Mussolini definite proposals of peace through the intermediary of the Crown Prince. Vatican circles to-day disclaimed any knowledge of definite proposals, but emphasised that His Holiness has never ceased to work for peace.

U.S. WOOING ITALY

The United States State Department, in a move to improve Italo-American relations, lifted to-night the penalty tariffs against most Italian silken goods. These special duties were imposed last August, on the theory that Italy was subsidising silk exports.

"TO PROTECT BALKANS"

Associated Press.

BERLIN, Tuesday.

Germany has laid the propaganda groundwork for a move to the Balkans if it becomes necessary "to protect" that area from becoming a new war zone, German sources said to-night.

In the surprising publication of the alleged telephone conversation on April 30 between Mr. Chamberlain and M. Paul Reynaud, the French Prime Minister, the Reich asserted that the Allies contemplated taking action in the Balkans on May 15, and, at the latest, on May 20. These dates were mentioned in the supposed conversation by Mr. Chamberlain as the latest time for action by General Maxime Weygand's army in Syria.

£5,000 OFFERED FOR INFORMATION

The Hold-up of Guards in a Dublin Street

SERIOUS CONDITION OF INJURED OFFICERS

GALLANTLY defending Government mail, two Civic Guards fell injured during a gun battle in Holles street, Dublin, yesterday morning. The Guards, armed with revolvers, fought an unequal battle against four or five men, who had Thompson machine-guns. They wounded one of the raiders, however, and prevented the mail from falling into unlawful hands.

Last night the condition of the injured police officers, who were promoted during the day to the rank of sergeant, was described at Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital, where they had been removed, as "hopeful."

Rewards up to £5,000 have been offered by the Government for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons, or any one of the persons, involved in the attack.

Children on their way to school and men on their way to work were witnesses of a scene like that from a gangster film, but it happened so quickly that few of those who saw the affray realised just what had occurred.

The Guards, William McSweeney and William Shanahan, were conveying State correspondence in a motor cycle combination, McSweeney being the driver. As they approached the Merrion square end of Holles street about 9.5 a.m. a motor car overtook them, cut in, and forced the combination against the pavement. As the motor cycle stopped, two Thompson machine-guns, fired from the car, sprayed it with bullets.

Without hesitation the Guards jumped from their vehicle, drawing revolvers as they did so. They were hemmed in by the car and a raider approached them. The resistance of the Guards seemed to surprise the raiders, who may have concluded that they would be wounded and would surrender the mails without a struggle.

Shots were exchanged between the Guards and the raider, who came towards them with a revolver in his hand. The raider dropped with at least one police bullet in him. A second raider caught him and dragged him towards the car, the engine of which had been kept running.

PRECIPITATE FLIGHT

The attention of the raiders turned from the mails to their own precipitate flight, and with the injured man still half hanging from the car it turned into Merrion square and got away. In all six bullets had been fired at them by one Guard, while the other's revolver seems to have jammed early in the action, or else a wound in his hand prevented him from using all its chambers.

Guard McSweeney received a bullet in the lung, and Guard Shanahan was injured in the spine, back, side and hand.

As the car drove off Guard McSweeney is said to have fired his last bullets after it.

A man who came into Holles street a few minutes after the raid said that the motor cycle then was in the gutter and the Fire Brigade ambulance was arriving. One of the Guards, who was wearing goggles, was standing at the door of the National Maternity Hospital, holding on to the railings. The other injured Guard had been brought inside. When an ambulance man was helping the Guard in the goggles (evidently Guard McSweeney) into the hospital he made a gesture as if to suggest that he could walk himself, though he was limping.

PROMOTED TO SERGEANT

At Guard Headquarters in Dublin Castle yesterday an Irish Times reporter was told: "We think that in the history of our police force there has been nothing to equal the bravery of these two men, who, with revolvers, drove off at least twice as many men who were armed with machine-guns."

Within four hours of the hold-up McSweeney and Shanahan had been promoted to sergeant. "It is the only gesture we can make to mark their bravery," said one of the senior officers of the force.

Shanahan, whose wife died seventeen days ago, joined the Dublin Metropolitan Police from Ballynure, Thurles, in 1923. He took part in the activities of the I.R.A. prior to 1922, when he joined the National Army, serving till December of that year. He had been in the Detective Branch since 1934. He was born in 1897. He was a well-known athlete, and for many years he was one of the country's greatest high jumpers. He also was a first-class performer in the hop, step and jump. He represented Ireland in the Decathlon at the Olympic Games of 1924, and in the same year he won the Decathlon at the first Tailteann Games.

McSweeney also had I.R.A. service. He joined the D.M.P. in 1924. He is married and has two children. McSweeney has been attached to the Detective Branch since joining the force. He was wounded in another shooting incident in 1922. On that occasion two armed men approached him and another Guard when they were on duty in the Phœnix Park, demanding that they put their hands up. They grappled with the men, and McSweeney was wounded by a revolver shot in the shoulder.

FEW PEOPLE ABOUT

After the raid there were surprisingly few people in Holles street—not more than ten adults. There were, however, about fifty children. Many of the people in the houses nearby were afraid to open their doors until they were certain that the shooting had concluded.

One man said he had seen the raiders jump into their car, which is believed to have been a Ford "Ten" black tourer.

Yesterday afternoon it was announced that the Government have authorised the offer of rewards up to £5,000 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction "of the persons or any one of the persons who took part in the murderous attack on two members of the Garda Siothchana in Holles street, Dublin. Information may be conveyed through any member of the Garda Siothchana."

During yesterday close attention was paid to passing cars by Guards on point duty, and on suburban roads motorists were interrogated. Detectives also visited motor garages and sought to trace the history of the car involved in the raid.

TRADE TALKS IN LONDON

Ministers Will Not Go Back To-day

FIRST SHIPMENT OF BUTTER

From Our Political Correspondent.

DR. RYAN (Minister for Agriculture) and Mr. Sean Lemass (Minister for Supplies) will not go to London to-day, it was learned last night. The reason for their change of plan is that the talks at present taking place in London have not reached a stage at which the Ministers could usefully assist.

BUTTER DELIVERY THIS WEEK-END

From Our Correspondent.

LONDON, Tuesday.

Arrangements were completed to-night whereby the first shipment of new season's Irish butter, amounting to about 250 tons, will be delivered to Britain this week-end. This has been agreed on pending the completion of the new price agreement, about which Dr. Ryan, Irish Minister for Agriculture, has been in negotiation with Lord Woolton (the Minister for Food). The shipment would be a normal amount at this time of the year.

Since Dr. Ryan and Mr. Lemass (Minister for Supplies) returned to Dublin on Saturday, following their four days' discussions with British Ministers, discussions between Irish and British officials have been continuing.

Mr. John Dulanty, the Irish High Commissioner; Mr. D. Twomey, secretary of the Department of Agriculture; Mr. Sean Leydon, secretary of the Department of Supplies; Mr. J. P. Walshe, secretary of the Department of External Affairs; and Mr. J. N Darcy, head of the Trade Section of the High Commissioner's Office, are taking part in the conference at the Ministries of Agriculture, Food, Supply and Shipping.

Lord Woolton's pointer that he might have to reduce the present weekly ration of eight ounces per head of butter in the near future, has no relation to the Anglo-Eire butter negotiations, since Eire's present contribution to the British market amounts to only a fraction of an ounce per week per person.

MR. EDEN'S STATEMENT

In the British House of Commons yesterday, Mr. D. G. Logan (Labour) asked the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs if he was in a position now to state the result of the trade talks between England and Eire; and if he proposed to give financial assistance to Eire farmers to enable them to make good the loss of Denmark's dairy produce.

Mr. Eden replied:—Discussions with the Eire Ministers of Supplies and Agriculture were held from Tuesday to Friday last week, and were then adjourned until later this week. In the interval, discussions between Eire and United Kingdom officials are continuing. Pending the conclusion of these discussions, I am not in a position to make any statement on the subject.

THIS IS BUDGET DAY

TO-DAY Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, Minister for Finance, will present his Budget for the financial year, in the Dail, immediately after questions. It will be Mr. O'Kelly's second Budget—his first being the emergency Budget, which was introduced on the 8th November last.

There is, as might be expected, much anticipation as to how the Minister will bridge the gap between the anticipated expenditure and the anticipated revenue, as indicated in the financial statement published yesterday. By five o'clock this evening the Dail will be in possession of the Minister's plans, and the fate of the public in respect of the taxation to be levied to meet the cost of Government.

When the necessary resolutions have been passed the House will proceed to the Committee stage of the Hospitals (Beds Bureau) Bill, and afterwards various estimates, including Lands, Forestry, and probably Industry and Commerce.

The Senate will also meet to-day for the second stage debate on the Institute of Advanced Studies Bill.

RELIGION IN EDUCATION

Need to Teach Fundamentals

SYNOD ADDRESS BY PRIMATE

THE necessity for a more intensive teaching of religion, particularly in the secondary schools, was urged by the Primate of All Ireland in his address at the opening of the General Synod of the Church of Ireland in Dublin yesterday.

The Synod, said Dr. Gregg, must declaim that any State that allowed religion to be left out of its programme of education was only toying with education and trifling with its own future.

"If the Battle of Waterloo was, as it has been said, won on the playing-fields of Eton, the campaign for the soul of Europe, if not of the world, will be fought and settled in the primary and the secondary school rooms," he declared in another passage.

Referring to the death of the last annuitant under the Irish Church Act of 1869, the Primate said that to-day they recorded the Church's final discharge of its obligation to the courageous men who trusted it.

Observing that some members of the Synod might, perhaps, expect him to make an extended reference to the war in which Great Britain was engaged, he added:—"But I do not propose to take advantage of the hospitality of the neutral country within whose borders we are assembled to do so." At the same time, he might be permitted to say something on one of the great moral issues involved—the issue of education—that was, religious education. The two things ought to be one and the same, but they were not. It was the business of a living Church to devote all its energies to the task of seeing that its children received an education in which the things of eternity had their place.

STATE RECOGNITION

Education in our islands was for a long time administered on religious lines; education was not then national in the sense in which it was to-day, but such education as was given was fostered by the Church or other religious agencies. One of the causes operating to displace religion from its constitutional position in the universities and elsewhere was to be found in the sectarian differences between religious men. But even though the provision and control of education lay to-day in the hands of the State and not of the Church, the State had recognised its obligation to draw out the mental faculties of its citizens; and what the Church began the State was carrying through. Education, national and compulsory, was an accepted element in our public administration. But what constituted education? Was all that needed to be considered the imparting of such an amount of vocational information as would enable the younger generation to earn its bread? Was the State concerned only with what its citizens knew, and not with what they were?

In an ideal condition of affairs, continued the Primate, such a position might, perhaps, be maintained. But, considering what depths of parental inefficiency existed, as well as how alarming an absence of parental sense of responsibility, it would only be wilful blindness to uphold such a view. The State was concerned with what its citizens were no less than with what they knew.

GERMAN CHILDREN

"And this," he went on, "is where international affairs teach us a lesson. Germany regards the State as most vitally concerned with the shaping of the dispositions, as well as of the minds, of its children. It makes it its business, under the present régime, to impregnate them from an early age with the notions and ideals prevailing among the country's rulers, so that they may grow up fully-formed National-Socialists. This is the natural attitude for the totalitarian State to adopt. Every citizen, young and old, belongs throughout his entire being and at every stage of his growth to the State, and it is to the State's interest to see that this principle is applied in its fullness and without exception.

"Granted the premises, does not the conclusion follow naturally? And does it not teach us a vitally important lesson—namely, that in a Christian State education should be definitely Christian? The children of the world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. If the Battle of Waterloo was, as it has been said, won on the playing fields of Eton, the campaign for the soul of Europe, if not of the world, will be fought and settled in the primary and the secondary schoolrooms.

"We then who stand for the Christian view of life must not be behindhand in seeking to give effect to what we on our part stand for," said Dr. Gregg. "We need to be as good Christian citizens as the Germans are good Nazis. But we are Christian democrats. If we are true to our Christian principles, that which is ultimate and final with us is not the State, but God. We cannot render everything to Cæsar: Cæsar must have all that is Cæsar's, but there are things which are God's on which Cæsar may not lay his hand."

PATRIOTISM

For us, he said, patriotism was contained within religion, and had to reconcile its claims with those of God. The law of country had to take its place within Divine law: there was a point at which Christians said: "Thus far and no further." Christian men had no right to allow the new generation to grow up without giving it as real a moral equipment as an intellectual one. Yet our sense of corporate responsibility in the matter of religious education was very much less developed than it should be. For far too long a time had we rested in the comfortable notion that religion was a private and personal matter, and that "I have done my duty if I have attended to my own soul." But we belonged to a society, a body, a Church; and it was the business of our society to see that the State in its educational practice reflected our moral convictions.

Christian morals were based on Christian religion: the morals would not long be kept without the religion. Therefore, the Christian people, who compose the State, ought to see that the children of the State learned Christian morals through the teachers of the Christian body to which they belonged. And Christian people could only move the State to act as they wished if they exerted a concentrated pressure. Individuals could be brushed aside—large, organised bodies must be attended to.

IN THE SCHOOLS

That was why he laid emphasis on the developing of a sense of corporate responsibility. Not only should our Church wish to see the State, whether in North of Ireland or South, caring for the moral upbringing of its youth, but it was concerned to urge that full advantage should be taken in our schools of such opportunities as the State did offer by the teachers it recognised in all schools, not only primary, but secondary.

He was inclined to think that there had been a tendency to concentrate attention unduly on the primary schools, and to forget the secondary schools. If he was right in this, the danger was a grave one, and must be met. Of course, the children attending primary schools were more numerous, but it was to the secondary schools that we must look in the main for the leadership of the days to come. If this class from which leaders were to come had had its education in moral and religious principle neglected, we faced a prospect of grave moral collapse.

"I urge the Synod, I urge parents in both jurisdictions in Ireland to take every care that the programme of secondary education should include an irreducible minimum of religious instruction," said the Primate. "Christian principle is not a thing of spontaneous growth. Christian principle needs to be inculcated. There is something of the pagan in every one of us, and, if the adolescent conscience is not furnished with definite teaching, which it can set over against the seductions of paganism, what is there to make it choose the higher and the harder way!"

PASSIVE RECIPIENTS

A fallacy which had marred much of their best educational efforts must, however, be guarded against. Merely to impart religious instruction was not the same thing as teaching religion. Book knowledge was very different from practical knowledge. It was the failure to recognise this which caused many boys and girls, who had been sedulously taught in day schools and Sunday schools, to drift away from the practice of religion when they were grown up. They had not been taught to worship God. They were passive recipients; they had never learned to use their spiritual muscles.

Dr. Gregg referred to "what always seems to me one of the crying weaknesses of the Sunday school"—that pupils who had come to learn in school went home before Divine Service. When the God they had been taught about was approached in worship they were not there either to see or to learn to take part. Thus the reality of religion was missed. A God unworshipped was a God unknown.

The community must watch over its children through its representatives—in the school, through teachers who both believed and practised their religion; in the home, through parents who themselves worshipped and brought their children to worship with them; through the clergy and through lay helpers, whether men or women, in the Church, who regarded every child as a potential worshipper, and as one whose native sense of the unseen must be drawn out and developed by participating in devout and sincere worship.

KNOWLEDGE OF GOD

The Church which did not acknowledge throughout its entire adult membership that it was responsible for setting the steps of its younger generation firmly on the road of worship and practice, as well as a knowledge, was a Church which was not true to one of its primary duties; for such a community survival in any vital sense was ruled out. Knowledge about God must be accompanied by knowledge of God. There was no knowledge of God without that approach to Him which was prayer and worship. The test of the reality of the religious conviction and the corporate life of the Church of Ireland was to be found in its determination that its youth shall be brought up in the fear of God. The Synod must declaim that any State that allowed religion to be left out of its programme of education was only toying with education and trifling with its own future.

FLOWERING SHRUBS AT THE SHOW

The large number of visitors crowding in to see the Watson exhibit of flowering shrubs at Ballsbridge bear witness to the increased interest now taken in gardening and shrubs in particular. In spite of the severe winter the Watson firm has again brought from Killiney Nurseries one of the best displays of flowering shrubs ever seen in Dublin. This occupies its usual place under canvas in the Machinery Paddock, and comprises about 300 flowering trees and shrubs in perfect flower and beautifully arranged for colour effect.

The ground adjoining is enclosed with hedges of evergreens, and displays a collection of fruit trees grown on the correct stocks and in all forms of training. Fruit trees, shrubs and roses are the chief cultures at Killiney Nurseries, and the quality there produced is too widely recognised to require comment.—(029.)

IRISH LITERARY SOCIETY

DR. STARKIE'S TALK ON WARTIME FRANCE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Tuesday.

Details about wartime France and a visit to the Maginot Line were given by Dr. Walter Starkie, Professor of Spanish and Lecturer in Italian at Dublin University, to members of the Irish Literary Society at Grosvenor street to-night. Lord Harmsworth presided.

Professor Starkie's parallel between the French and Irish peasants was praised by Mr. W. P. Anderson, who proposed the vote of thanks, seconded by Mr. Gerald Grone.

The peasant was the root of the community, said Mr. Anderson. Germany had gone to endless trouble to encourage the land and its cultivation. An Englishman whom he had just met, who had visited the Maginot forts, while praising their air ventilation, had said that he would not like to live in a tube railway.

Mr. Anderson referred to the extraordinary character of the French peasant and the absence of materialism, and, at the same time, their sound common-sense, to which materialism could not rise.

DEATH FOLLOWS KICK FROM HORSE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

CARNDONAGH, Tuesday.

Mr. James Faulkner, a well-known farmer, of Carrowbeg, Moville, County Donegal, died to-day, when he was kicked by a horse he was releasing from a rope. While walking on his farm he saw the horse lying entangled in the rope, and, while he was freeing the horse, it rose to its feet and kicked out, catching Mr. Faulkner in the stomach.

Other people on the farm ran to him and found him dead.

He was fifty-four years old, and was a local ploughing champion, having won prizes at Inishowen Ploughing Society meetings. An inquest will be held to-morrow.

NO WOMEN IN THE SYNOD

REVIVED MOTION DEFEATED

CONFLICTING VIEWS ON SUBJECT

THE General Synod of the Church of Ireland, meeting in the Synod Hall, Christ Church place, Dublin, yesterday, again rejected the proposal that women should be admitted to the Synod and to the higher offices of the Church.

The proposal has been before the Synod on many occasions, and often has been described as "a hardy annual." When a bill for the purpose was introduced last year the debate on it was adjourned to enable other pressing business to be dealt with.

The second reading of the bill, which sought to amend the Constitution to enable women to become members of the Representative Body, of the General and Diocesan Synods, parochial nominators, Churchwardens, and so forth, was moved by Senator Sir John Keane, Bart. He said that in all the offices of the State, in the professions, and in the Anglican Church, there was no differentiation between the sexes. That being so, was the claim not overwhelmingly strong that in the Church where women had such a deep concern with religious life, where they were most constant and most regular attenders at Church Services, and most deeply concerned with religious education, women should have a say in the lay side of the management of Church affairs!

A PLEBISCITE?

It had been said that the measure was not wanted by the women themselves, or in so far as it was wanted the demand came from "political sacerdotally-minded busy-bodies," and not from the more earnest section of their women workers. He wondered if those who held that view would agree to abide by a plebiscite of Church women. The argument was based on mere surmise, and was incidental to the main issue. Even if only ten per cent. of their women wanted representation, they should have the right to exercise it or not, as they thought fit.

Although the objections to the bill would, he said, be made with great vigour, time, the great renovator, was also the great eliminator, and whatever happened the bill they could confidently rely on a more enlightened generation to secure a victory which was long since overdue.

TWO CHURCHES

The Dean of Killaloe (the Very Rev. R. M. Boyd), seconding, said that it was an extraordinary thing that the Church of Ireland and the Church of Rome were the only two churches in Western Christendom which, so far, had denied justice to the women members of the Church.

The Rev. F. J. Mouritz, opposing, said that if the doors of the Synod were thrown open the record of the Synod as second to none among legislative assemblies would be broken. He had spoken about this subject to many great women parish workers, and 99 per cent. had declared that they did not want to have anything to do with the Synod.

Mr. John Bagwell said that women would be as much out of place in the Synod as men would be in the housekeeper's room.

CONTRARY TO TEACHING

The Rev. Henry O'Connor said that if they admitted women to the higher offices of the Church how could they withhold from them the office of bishop? Their admission was contrary to New Testament teaching.

The Rev. J. Browne, supporting the bill, said that they could not confine the new wine of the capabilities of women in the old bottles of traditionalism. Instead, as had been suggested, of women driving men out of the Synod, they would bring in new life, new vigour, new interest. They would have such initiative and intelligence that they would be able to perfect a bill for the election of bishops.

Mr. R. Williams (Cork) said that once they admitted women to the Synod the logical outcome of that would be the admission of women to the ministry. Such a position was threatening in England, where last week a tremendous effort had been made to get women to take the place of ministers out on war duty.

The second reading was rejected on a show of hands.

SELECTION OF BISHOPS

Mr. Gerald FitzGibbon, K.C., moved the second reading of a bill which sought to amend the Statutes passed at the last Synod dealing with the appointment of a Board of Selectors to select a list of names for submission to the Synod of a vacant diocese for which the Synod may elect a bishop. The amending bill sought chiefly to provide that the different dioceses and the different parts of a united diocese would have the right to choose their own representatives to act on the Board of Selectors.

The second reading was agreed to.

On the Committee stage of the bill, a proposal that it should not be necessary to obtain the consent of a clergyman before his selection by the Board of Selectors was passed.

The Bishop of Limerick (Dr. King Irwin) said that a clergyman might refuse to allow his name to go forward in case it might be thought that he wanted to get into the limelight, whereas, if the call came to him and his name was put on the select list, he would ask himself very seriously whether he could refuse.

The Dean of Belfast (the Rev. W. S. Karr) said that, under the present Act, one clergyman might be asked to consent to allow his name to go forward by, perhaps, thirty selectors.

The Committee stage was passed, and the third reading was fixed for to-morrow.

SUPERANNUATION

Mr. F. W. Price, K.C., moved the second reading of a bill designed to amend the Church constitution relating to the superannuation of clergymen. It provided that clergymen who, with the leave of their bishops, became chaplains in the Air Force were in the same position as chaplains in the Army and Navy, or as clergy who were not in the Services. In the last war, Mr. Price said, clergymen who volunteered as Army or Navy chaplains were admitted to the benefits of the superannuation provisions, but no provision had been made for clergy attached to the Air Force.

The second reading was agreed to.

The Synod having agreed to a number of amendments on the committee stage, the Dean of Derry paid a tribute to Mr. Price for the trouble he had taken in drafting and explaining the amendments. The Church of Ireland, he said, owed a great deal to its lawyers.

The Bishop of Limerick proposed the second reading of a bill providing that where there were accumulations of Episcopal Superannuation Fund income not required for retiring annuities and assessment payable to the Superannuation Fund, the Representative Body might make grants to any Archbishop or Bishop towards meeting costs incurred by him through prolonged illness to himself or a member of his family dependent on him.

The second and committee stages were passed.

The Synod adjourned until to-day.

DUTCH CANCELS ARMY LEAVE

MEUSE AND RHINE MOUTHS CLOSED

GERMAN PRESS HINTS

HOLLAND last night cancelled the leave of all her armed forces and munition workers, and announced that the mouths of the Rivers Meuse and Rhine will be closed to shipping from May 11 to 13.

These moves came at the close of a day of growing fears that a German counter-stroke to alleged Allied plans to extend the war front is imminent somewhere in Europe.

German aggressions have usually been preceded by such allegations.

There was some slackening of tension in Yugoslavia following Italian and German Press denials of plans for aggression in South-east Europe, and a British denial that troops will be sent through Greece.

The orders for cancelling leave were broadcast over the Dutch Radio. Soldiers, sailors and airmen already are hurrying to rejoin their units from all parts of the country. Civilian passengers are being asked to leave trains to make room for them.

A further order issued last night recalls two classes of marines—those of 1927 and 1928. These men are specially concerned with coastguard work.

SURPRISE

Nothing definite is known of the reasons which prompted yesterday's order, states a Press Association War Special Hague telegram. While fears of a new German coup had increased during the past few days the announcement took the Dutch people by surprise, since they had believed that the danger to the low countries had somewhat receded.

The Press Association understands that, although anxiety has been felt on several occasions in the past, a more than usually serious view is being taken here of the present possibilities.

GROWING TENSION

While tension thus grows in all countries surrounding Germany, the German Press also seems to hint at the possibility of air-raids on shipyards in Great Britain.

A Hamburger Fremdenblatt article mentions the dockyards of Devonport, Chatham, Portsmouth, Sheerness and Rosyth, as well as the shipyards at Birkenhead, Glasgow, Belfast and Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The newspaper adds: "The preparedness of the British Fleet depends to an unusual extent on the speed with which its units can be repaired."

PRESBYTERY OF DUBLIN

REGRET AT PASSING OF DR. MORROW

THE Presbytery of Dublin met at 16 St. Stephen's Green yesterday, the Moderator, the Rev. R. Crossett, being in the chair. After the reading of the minutes of the meeting adjourned in token of respect for the late Very Rev. J. L. Morrow, M.A., D.D., and the following minute, on the motion of Dr. Hanna, seconded by the Rev. J. S. Rutherford, was adopted:—

"The Presbytery of Dublin have learned with profound sorrow of the death of the Very Rev. John Love Morrow, M.A., D.D., who for fifty-six years was one of the best-known and most beloved of their members.

"As a Licentiate of the Ballymena Presbytery, Dr. Morrow was ordained in Gloucester street, Dublin, in 1864. There he laboured with such success for six years that the congregation found it necessary to move to the suburb of Clontarf. The picturesque granite church built on a commanding site will always remain as a memorial to Dr. Morrow—to the vision which saw and the courage which carried through the changes of which the present building is the result. The Presbytery bear tribute to Dr. Morrow's deep interest in education, to which we owe the flourishing schools at Clontarf. As Dean of Residence and Senior Catechist in Trinity College he rendered valuable services to many generations of Presbyterian students.

"It was a great gratification to the Presbytery when in 1929 the whole Church recognised Dr. Morrow's outstanding ability and work by calling him to the highest office in its gift, the Moderatorship of the General Assembly—an office which he adorned.

"The Presbytery feel that in Dr. Morrow's death they have lost a member who rendered faithful and valued service in their deliberations and in the transaction of their affairs. He was interested in everything that concerned the well-being of the Church and served on many committees. Everyone regarded him as one of the wisest of the Church's leaders. He was kind, courteous and considerate in his relationships with his fellow-Presbyters.

"The Presbytery appreciate the eminent part Dr. Morrow played in public affairs, and the high esteem in which he was held by all creeds and classes among whom he lived and worked.

"They express to his loyal congregation their sympathy in the loss of a minister who was a scholar, a preacher, a writer, and a Christian gentleman, who, after he has served his own generation, by the will of God is now fallen asleep.

"To his widow and son, to his sisters and relatives, the Presbytery also express their profound sympathy, and pray that the God of all Grace may fill them, even in this time of sorrow, with joy and peace in believing."

OTHER BUSINESS

A deputation from the committee of the Home for Aged Presbyterian Women, consisting of Mrs. Bonner, Mrs. Quigley, Mrs. Cairns, Dr. Boyd and Mr. Stanley Sloan, was received. On the motion of the Rev. J. S. Rutherford, seconded by the Rev. Dr. J. A. H. Irwin, the Presbytery approved of the appeal made by the deputation for the sum of £300 from the congregations within its bounds.

Leave of absence owing to illness was granted to the Rev. P. K. Lyle, of Greystones. Arrangements were made for the ordination of elders in Abbey and Howth congregations.

A report of the work carried on in connection with the Association for the Suppression of Mendicancy in Dublin was submitted by Mr. William Petrie, P.C. The Rev. Thomas Bole, in his report on the recent examination in Sabbath Schools, referred to the fact that results had been very much better than in any previous year during his convenership. The Rev. R. C. Gillespie, Convener of Missionary Propaganda, referred to the centenary celebrations of the foreign mission to begin in July, and asked for the hearty co-operation of all the congregations of the Presbytery. He reported that the congregation of Kingstown had undertaken the full support of a missionary on the foreign field.

The Rev. J. S. Crockett was appointed convener of the Students' Committee, in succession to the late Very Rev. J. L. Morrow.

Arrangements having been made for the licensing of a student, Mr. Donald Kennedy, in Adelaide Road Church on May 26, the Presbytery was dismissed by the Moderator pronouncing the Benediction.

DUCK DRIVING DISPLAY

The demonstration of duck-driving which was given by Mr. G. L. Pennefather, of Cookstown, with his Irish sheepdog, Spy, in the jumping enclosure at Ballsbridge yesterday was such a popular success that the Royal Dublin Society has arranged with Mr. Pennefather to give further demonstrations on Thursday afternoon at 3.45 p.m. and Saturday at 3.30 p.m.

War Cabinet, the Prime Minister said that he, Lord Hankey and Mr. Churchill were in agreement that there would be no saving of time or quicker decisions if they had a Cabinet composed solely or mainly of members freed from departmental work.

MR. CHURCHILL'S DUTIES

Mr. Chamberlain recalled the appointment last month of Mr. Churchill as Chairman of the Military Co-ordination Committee of the Cabinet. After some experience of his duties Mr. Churchill suggested that to make his assistance to the Cabinet more effective it would be a good thing to put him in closer contact with the Chiefs of Staff.

Mr. Churchill had been authorised by the Cabinet, on behalf of the Military Co-ordination Committee, to give guidance and direction to the Chiefs of Staff Committee, who would prepare the plans to carry out the objectives which were given to them by him. Under this arrangement Mr. Churchill would have a special responsibility for the supervision of military operations day by day, and, no doubt, they would in this way ensure that every aspect of military policy was examined, and that policies decided upon were followed up with promptness and energy.

WORK AT THE ADMIRALTY

Answering Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Chamberlain said that the important work at the Admiralty would remain in Mr. Churchill's hands, but if Mr. Churchill found it difficult to continue to work at the Admiralty, he (Mr. Chamberlain) would have to take steps to relieve him. Mr. Churchill had not had these new powers before the Norwegian operations. They did not arise out of the Norwegian situation; the change would have been made in any case. Mr. Churchill would have a small personal staff under Major-General Ismay.

Appealing for co-operation, the Prime Minister said it was in the production of planes, tanks, guns and munitions that they wanted organisation, energy and good-will.

"We do not set ourselves up to be faultless, and we do not set up as being above receiving help from others who are willing to help.

"Let us, then, before fresh trials come upon us, put all our strength in this work of preparing for it—and we shall steadily increase our strength until we ourselves are able to deliver our blows where and when we will." (Cheers.)

THE WAR CABINET

MR. ATTLEE'S DOUBTS

Mr. Attlee, Leader of the Opposition, said he thought the Prime Minister's speech last Thursday was over-optimistic and complacent, and that of Mr. Churchill far too optimistic. To-day the Prime Minister struck a rather different note—a good deal more a note of excuse and explanation. They were not afraid of facing facts. This was a reverse. High hopes had been raised partly by speeches of Ministers and partly by the Press and wireless. He could not believe the Government had no influence on the Press by means of advice. It was ill-advised that the people should have been led to imagine everything was going wonderfully well.

He had heard stories of young boys being sent out without any training. Older and more experienced men ought to have been sent. Despite all the Prime Minister had said, he was not satisfied that the present War Cabinet was an effective instrument for conducting the war.

"TOO LATE"

There was widespread anxiety in the country. People were saying that those mainly responsible for the conduct of affairs had an almost uninterrupted career of failure. Everywhere the story was: "Too late."

"In this life-and-death struggle we cannot afford to leave our destinies in the hands of failures or men who need a rest." (Loud and prolonged Opposition cheers.)

SIR A. SINCLAIR'S CRITICISMS

MUDDLE, WASTE AND CONFUSION

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Leader of the Liberal Opposition, held that the decision to evacuate Southern Norway was right, but asked why they ever got into the position of having to accept this defeat.

"Not that our defeat in Norway is a major military disaster. Greater shocks were sustained in the last war."

Something had happened which suggested that more foresight and energy and more ruthless will to victory was required to direct their war effort. Although the Minister of Supply was photographed in a white coat as part of the Scandinavian equipment, the troops at Namsos had no white coats. "Apparently he had the only one." Men back from both fronts in Norway had told him they had no snow shoes.

SERIOUS ALLEGATIONS

Referring to allegations of muddle, waste and confusion, which should be the subject of close inquiry, he said that two anti-aircraft guns were landed with unsuitable mountings, no sight-finders, no trained men to work the gun, no fuse keys to set the fuses, no range tables, and no trajectory chart. They were utterly useless.

He declared that one transport was without chronometer and barometer, had no arms, not even a rifle, no splinter-proof protection, not even a tin hat. On its return it had no escort and no medical attention for a small number of wounded soldiers. Only one in three of her lifeboats could be swung out.

Swedes had told him they were concerned to notice that Norwegian and Danish towns and cities were bombed by the British Air Force, but they did not bomb German towns from which the German troops embarked.

The first step to adequate preparation should be a smaller War Cabinet, free from departmental responsibilities.

DANGER OF INVASION

Mr. J. Winterbottom (Labour, Newcastle-under-Lyme) thought one of the lessons learned from the Norwegian Expedition was that, while the Navy was saving them from starvation, they could not save them from invasion. He considered there was danger of invasion, and that the civilian population should be taught to resist the invaders until regular troops arrived. To beat the Germans they must also use the lightning stroke, the essence of which was something illegal and unexpected.

"SHOCKING STORY"

Sir Roger Keyes (C., Portsmouth, N.), who in the last war led the Zeebrugge raid, declared that if a few ships had entered Trondheim immediately the Army was ready to co-operate its capture would have been accomplished.

"When I realised how badly things were going lately, and saw another Gallipoli looming ahead, I never ceased importuning the Admiralty and the War Cabinet to let me take all responsibility for organising and leading the attack." (Hear, hear.)

It was not the fault of the officers and men for whom he spoke that the naval co-operation on which the General Commanding the Namsos Force was not provided. When the General was confident of success, and was advancing along the road from Steinker to Trondheim, instead of finding British ships to assist him with gunfire and harass the enemy, he found two German destroyers which opened fire on his flank and landed men behind his advanced force, thus defeating the whole military expedition.

"It is a shocking story of ineptitude—Opposition cheers — which ought never to have been allowed to happen if proper steps had been taken immediately and carried out with resolution and speed," he declared.

CALL FOR VIGOROUS ACTION

"If we had only used our sea power vigorously and courageously the German Army in Norway would by now have been in a very dangerous position, and would eventually have been decisively defeated."

The troops at Namsos were in good heart and the British and French Generals were furious at being evacuated. He had great admiration for Mr. Churchill and longed to see proper use made of his great abilities. That would not be done under the existing system. Wars cannot be won by committees.

He begged Mr. Churchill to take steps to ensure that more vigorous naval action in Norway was not delayed. In this he would have the whole Navy whole-heartedly behind him.

LAMENTABLE AFFAIR

Sir Henry Page Croft (C., Bournemouth), referring to Press criticisms of the Government and the Prime Minister, said: "Let the leaders of the parties state their case to the Government, but do not let us who are fighting dictators submit to a new dictatorship of the Press."

Mr. Amery (C., Sparkbrook) did not feel that there was one sentence in the Prime Minister's speech which suggested that the Government foresaw what Germany meant to do, or came to a clear decision when it knew what Germany had done, or acted swiftly or consistently throughout the whole lamentable affair. The whole conduct of the war up to date called for searching inquiry in a series of private sittings.

NEW WAR CABINET

Mr. Amery contended there should be a War Cabinet on the lines of the last war. The Opposition parties would have to take their definite share in responsibility for the conduct of the war, and the T.U.C., through one of its leaders, must reinforce the Government. The time must come for a real National Government.

Sir Archibald Southby (C., Epsom) commented that Mr. Amery's speech would give great heart to the German Government. He did not believe that any serving officer of the Navy had asked Sir Roger Keyes to be his spokesman in the House. No one knew better than the Admiral that what he advocated was against all naval strategy.

Earl Winterton (C., Horsham) was inclined to favour an inquiry, presided over by a Law Lord, with two High Court Judges, with power to examine all, from the Prime Minister and the Chief of Staff downwards. Those of them who were at Gallipoli regretted to this day that some ministers were not impeached and some high Generals court-martialled.

Mr. Greenwood (Lab., Wakefield) did not believe the people would lose faith in the nation's leaders, but they would part company with the leaders who failed them. Wars were not won by masterly evacuations.

FIGHT STILL GOES ON

Mr. Stanley, War Minister, who spoke of "foregoing some of my best points" to avoid assisting the enemy, said that it was not facing facts to think that just because there had been little fighting on the Western Front there was no threat there, and that at any moment the greatest storm might burst which would be absolutely decisive for this country.

"I admit quite frankly that in the minds of all of us the probability, indeed almost the certainty, was that the German descent would be on the southern and not on the western ports of Norway."

The Germans would have been unable to force the batteries at Bergen and Trondheim had they been in action. The task which had faced the British was not to help Norway, but to reconquer it. Let the House not forget that the fight in Norway still went on.

It was no easy job to give an order for evacuation, but there was no excuse for ordering the sacrifice of men's lives if there was no military object to be gained.

He did not for a moment despair of ultimate victory, but before it was attained we would all have to make an immensity of sacrifice, suffer bitter loss and experience great changes.

The debate was adjourned until to-day.

BRAY RATES

CHAIRMAN'S STATEMENT ON ESTIMATE

When the Bray Urban Council met last night to consider the adoption of the estimate of town and poor rate for the year ending 31st March, 1941,

The Chairman (Mr. Peter Ledwidge) said that he was sorry the Council would have to postpone the consideration of the estimate of rates, as they had sent to the Minister for Local Government a request that the financial position of the Council should be looked into. The original estimate was drawn up and placed before the Minister, with a request that he should receive a deputation, and grant sanction to an overdraft, as it would have been an impossibility for the ratepayers to pay such a rate.

No answer had been received to that request, but he was sorry that the information was used at a public meeting, and the impression got abroad that the Council was going to strike an impossible rate. That estimate was drawn up to impress upon the Minister the financial position of Bray, and also to make suggestions why the Minister should receive the deputation. The Minister subsequently stated that he had no knowledge of their request for the reception of a deputation, whereas the head of the Department stated that the Minister did not think that the position called for discussion with a deputation.

That Urban Council, the Chairman proceeded, was in a different position to that of the other Councils. They had to meet huge commitments which had been entered into years ago, and which constituted a heavy burden on the town. Some relief should be given by the Government to the town, as the position had grown steadily worse.

The Council had cut down estimates to a figure which, they thought, the ratepayers were in a position to pay, but, unfortunately, there was a deficit in the rates and the rents at the end of last year.

The Council agreed to postpone the consideration of the estimate of rates for a week.

CO. MEATH GAME TRESPASS FINES

At Kilcock District Court, yesterday, summonses were heard at the prosecution of the Irish Game Protection Association on a charge of trespass in pursuit of game (pheasants) against James Feihily, The Lodge, Killyon, Hill of Down, County Meath, National School teacher; James Rooney, Trim, County Home official; Patrick Lee, Crow Park, Trim, Civic Guard, and Thomas J. MacKitarian, Court House, Trim, County Surveyor.

Mr. A. Noonan, the owner of the land; Mr. Seton Pringle, F.R.C.S.I., the owner of the shooting, and Mr Charles Hoey, the association inspector, gave evidence, and District Justice Beddin imposed fines of £2 each in the cases against Feihily and MacKitarian, and £1 each in the cases against Lee and Rooney. He ordered each defendant to pay £1 costs, and, in addition, ordered MacKitarian to pay £2 witnesses' expenses.

Mr. C. W. Grove-White (White and White, solicitors) appeared for the Game Association, and the defendants were represented by Mr. A. J. Malone, solicitor, Trim.

NORWAY'S RESOLVE TO HOLD OUT

King's Proclamation To His People

THAT the "pacification" of Central and Southern Norway can be regarded as concluded, is claimed by the Berlin Official News Agency. Meanwhile, King Haakon has issued a Proclamation to the Norwegian people, in which he states that he and the Government were firm, resolved to hold out until the country has been liberated.

King Haakon's Proclamation states:—

"In Northern Norway we still occupy strong positions, and from here we shall succeed, with the help which is now being planned, in reconquering the rest of the country.

The proclamation recalls the facts of the invasion—how the Germans occupied or bombed Norway's main ports, fortresses, and aerodromes, seized supplies, and often made Norwegian mobilisation impossible.

"It was not surprising," it continues, "that some people found the situation hopeless.

"But I, the Storting, and the Government, conscious of our responsibility, unanimously resolved not to accept the conditions dictated by the invader.

"As the first German assault was criminal and brutal, so the German warfare of the past four weeks has been ruthless and barbarian.

"Open towns, defenceless country places, fishermen in their small fishing boats, and hospital ships with big easily-seen Red Cross marks, have been bombed and machine-gunned.

"It is not war, but murder and arson, which the Germans are practising in Norway.

"Despite the heroic fight by our Fleet, and the resistance from our troops and the Allied forces, the enemy's superior forces were too overwhelming.

"Our allies have found it necessary to withdraw their troops from Aandalsnes and Namsos and place them elsewhere, and now practically all Southern Norway is in the enemy's hands.

SITUATION NOT HOPELESS

"But the situation is not hopeless. It is the enemy's superiority both in numbers and technically, both on the ground and especially in the air, which has forced us to retreat.

"We have reason to believe that this will soon be changed.

"In approximately the same conditions our soldiers are fully equal to the German soldiers, and to more than that.

"The German losses on sea and on land have hitherto been many times greater than our own.

"Neither the inhuman warfare carried on by the Germans against civilians, nor the bombing, nor the arson have brought the results desired.

"The mood of the people is unshaken.

"NORWAY FOR THE NORWEGIANS"

"Every house destroyed, even the assassination of defenceless civilians, has only strengthened the firm resolution of the people to turn the invaders out of the country.

"We are sure that the people in the occupied districts will act with the dignity which is required by the circumstances.

"I and the Government are firmly resolved to hold out until the country has been liberated."

Urging the Norwegian people to stand by his side in the fight for freedom, King Haakon concludes:—

"Even if the burdens are heavy and sorrow and privation strike our homes, do not lose courage.

"The fight is for the future of Norway—Norway for the Norwegians!"

"PACIFICATION" CONCLUDED

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

BERLIN, Tuesday.

The "pacification" of Central and Southern Norway can be regarded as concluded, the Official News Agency announced to-night. It added that large quantities of arms and ammunition were being discovered and daily converted to German use. News of troop movements were scarce here to-day.

The Norwegian warfare has settled into a race between the Allied force closing around Narvik and the northward moving force of Germans, who are attempting to establish an aerodrome at Bodoe, in order to bomb the Allied sea and land forces, the Germans state.

Observers believe that the German garrison at Narvik has not been reinforced since the first arrival of troops.

The German forces are now at Mosjoen, halfway between Namsos and Bodoe, it is claimed.

GERMAN ADVANCE TO NORTH DENIED

NORWEGIAN HEAD-QUARTERS' STATEMENT

SOMEWHERE IN NORWAY, Tuesday.

German claims to have occupied certain towns north of Namsos are categorically denied by Norwegian military headquarters in Northern Norway, states the Norwegian Telegraph Agency.

No German soldier has yet crossed the border between the province of North Trondelag and the province of Nordland, the Agency states.

The border runs south of Majavann, in the Nam Valley, which lies to the north-east of Namsos.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES REPORTED

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

STOCKHOLM, Tuesday.

A continual stream of lorries, loaded with German dead and wounded, is arriving in Oslo, according to Swedish Press despatches. The total German losses in the fighting are estimated to be considerable. The dead are being given mass funerals in groups of fifty.

More schools in Oslo have been requisitioned by the authorities, and it is believed that Norwegian prisoners are to be housed in them. The food shortage in Norway is becoming more and more serious, the despatches add.

FOR COAST PATROL

GERMANS REQUISITION NORWEGIAN SHIPS

Seven large and ten smaller Norwegian vessels were armed and manned yesterday for use as coastguard ships, the German wireless stated last night.

They are sailing under the German flag.

More and more Norwegian ships are being requisitioned for this purpose, the announcer added.

BENCH WARNING TO JUVENILES

The Judge, commenting on appeals on behalf of juveniles convicted in the District Court of doing malicious damage to property, said that the Senior Justice of the Metropolitan District Court was faced with a great problem, and that he had limited means of dealing with it. The persons to deal with the problem were the parents. It seemed to him, although he might be wrong, that Dublin appeared to fare worse in respect of malicious damage than other cities. He would like to dispel the idea that offenders were entitled to a "first bite." Juveniles would not necessarily go free.

TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL WELFARE

"A POSITIVE PROGRAMME"

Speaking last night at the annual meeting of the Church of Ireland Temperance and Social Welfare Society, in the Molesworth Hall, Dublin, the Dean of Down said that they had a positive programme, and were the spearhead of the Church's attack on moral and social evils of our day. Every social movement must be inspired by a religious motive.

They were carrying on the heritage of the small group of enthusiasts who founded the Society in 1878. The times were so serious that the Church would either have to take the initiative and live dangerously or possibly go under for at least a time. The evil that they were up against could not be driven out; it must be crowded out by better things.

Speaking of education, the Dean said that they must have a department of propaganda and information. He also referred to the work that could be done through teaching in the schools, and mentioned that they circulated 31,000 temperance leaflets twice a year.

The cheap price of Empire wines in Northern Ireland was described by the Dean as a menace to sobriety. The remedy, he thought, might be an increase in the duty.

The Archdeacon of Clonfert and the Rev. St. J. Pike (Southern Church Mission, Ballymacarrett) also spoke.

A musical programme was contributed under the direction of the Rev. R. Ross.

FUNERAL OF MR. C. M. BROWNE

The funeral of Mr. Charles Maximilian Browne, of 99 St. Lawrence road, Clontarf, took place yesterday. It was private. Mr. Browne, in February, 1883, when about 25 years of age, joined the staff of Messrs. Eason and Son, Dublin, and was in charge of the wholesale debtors' ledger department for about forty-seven years, when he took over the work of the impersonal ledgers of the two associated companies—Messrs. Eason and Son, Ltd., and Messrs. Eason and Son (Belfast), Ltd. He retired on pension at the beginning of this year after a continuous service of almost fifty-seven years. Mr. Browne had a genius for office organisation, and up to the last was introducing new methods of improving the work.

THE STORY OF KIRWAN HOUSE

THE FEMALE ORPHAN HOUSE

Of the multitude of charitable organisations that arose in Dublin in the latter part of the eighteenth century, one of the most notable survivals is the Female Orphan House, which has served the Church of Ireland well and faithfully for 150 years.

The Institution is, perhaps, not so well known as it deserves to be among the members of the Church. Many, of course, are aware of its existence, and are familiar with the pleasing orphanage building and chapel on the North Circular road, but few have very much knowledge of the great work which has been carried on there, quietly and unostentatiously for a century and a half.

HAPPY CHILDREN

The visitor to Kirwan House immediately will become aware of the happiness of the children. Here is no traditional orphanage, administered in a cold and unsympathetic manner; but a home for happy girls, who live together as a Christian family under the wise guidance and loving care of the Matron, Mrs. Mitchell, and the Chaplain, the Rev. A. P. Armstrong.

The Female Orphan House came into existence at a time when the plight of the poor in the city was calling forth great efforts to relieve their suffering by the more charitably-minded of the richer citizens. It was situated originally in Prussia street, the present building being opened in 1792. A preliminary meeting appointed as Governors the Lord Lieutenant, the archbishops and bishops of the Church of Ireland, the Privy Councillors of Ireland, and John and Henry La Touche. An English lady, Mrs. Este, who was the main instrument in founding the institution, became honorary superintendent. On her death, in 1791, her place was taken by Mrs. Elizabeth La Touche, wife of Peter La Touche, and for fifty years this benevolent lady devoted herself to the affairs of the orphanage with enthusiasm and unstinted generosity.

A DEAN'S DEVOTION

On one occasion, when funds were nearly exhausted and the existence of the institution was threatened, it was advertised that Dean Kirwan would preach on behalf of the orphans. Before the date fixed for the appeal he became seriously ill, and his life was considered in danger. He was, therefore, compelled to abandon the thought of preaching for his favourite charity. Mrs. La Touche, however, did not give up the idea that the Dean would fulfil the engagement. She visited him daily during his illness, and at 11 o'clock on the morning of the Sunday appointed her carriage was at his door, and she herself was at his bedside. Then for the first time she told him of her expectations. "In an hour," she said, "the church will be filled, the orphans will be there; will their friend, their father, forsake them? You are ill; I know it; very weak; but come, just show yourself, it will be enough, and God will bless you!" The good lady prevailed; the Dean was dressed and borne to her carriage. He was assisted to the pulpit, and he appeared to be so ill that many in the congregation believed that he would not leave it alive. The result of his appeal exceeded expectations, and the institution was saved. Such was the enthusiasm and devotion of the early workers for the orphans.

Dean Kirwan's interest in the institution which now bears his name commenced in 1702, when he preached on its behalf the first of a series of annual sermons. By his matchless eloquence and obvious sincerity he succeeded in raising large sums, on three occasions the response to his appeal amounting to over £1,000.

The interior of the beautiful chapel, which was opened in 1818, is almost identical with that of the Chapel Royal. The girls attend the Sunday Services clad in their quaint eighteenth century dresses.

The succeeding years brought forth many friends to aid the orphanage, and a large Government grant, continued annually for over 130 years, helped to remove financial worries.

MANY ACTIVITIES

During its 150 years the House has cared for over 1,300 girls. Those of the present day have many activities. The older girls attend the technical schools, while the younger ones are pupils of Blacquiere Bridge School. There is attached to the House a company of Guides and Brownies and branches of the Girls' Friendly Society and the Young Peoples' Union; in addition, the girls have lectures on first aid and home nursing. For holidays one month each summer is spent at the seaside—a benefit made possible through the munificence of the late Mr. Gibson Black, who in 1878 gave a gift of £1,000 to be invested for the purpose.

The changed conditions of the present century have brought many difficulties. Many former generous subscribers either have died or left the country, and there have been few to replace them. In addition, the former substantial Government help has been reduced to about one-fifth of its original total. Every possible economy has been effected, but the Finance Committee is faced with a steadily rising overdraft, which now exceeds £1,000. The difficulties will be intensified in the future, as rising prices mean increased expenditure, and a big family of over sixty girls must be fed and clothed. Many new friends must come forward very soon if the work of the institution is not to be curtailed.

MR. WILLIAM CONOR'S EXHIBITION

VISIT OF SIR JOHN MAFFEY

Yesterday afternoon Sir John Maffey visited the exhibition of paintings of Irish life which Mr. William Conor, A.R.H.A., R.O.I., is holding at Combridge's Galleries, Grafton street, Dublin.

The British Representative expressed warm admiration of the paintings. He spent some considerable time in the galleries, and was introduced to the artist.

PHŒNIX PARK PROGRAMME

“NEW” TWO-YEAR-OLDS IN LAIDLAW PLATE

Westport Will Make Bold Bid in “Sprint”: First Race at 6.30

'Buses from O'Connell Bridge.

WHAT promises to be a very enjoyable evening's sport should reward patrons of the Phœnix Park meeting, where fields of nice strength will contest the majority of the half-dozen events which comprise the card. Those of the numerous visitors to Dublin for the Spring Show who are racing-minded will, no doubt, make use of the opportunity thus afforded of indulging their taste, and the late hour of starting (6.30) also will suit city business people.

Tote Double on Fourth and Fifth Races.

The majority of the eleven two-year-olds declared for the principal event, the Laidlaw Plate, which is endowed with 200 sovs., will be making a first appearance in public, and of those that have run Power boasts the best credentials. Boojum, who defeated a big field at this venue on last Saturday, reads a backable proposition in the Esker Plate; and Westport, with all his weight, will take some beating in the Edenderry Plate, which well may prove the most interesting race of the day. Selections:—

Enfield Plate—Polly's Star.
Enniskerry Hurdle Race—Sunburn II.
Esker Plate—Boojum.
Laidlaw Plate—Power.
Emo Plate—Rockleigh.
Edenderry Plate—Westport.

TOTE DOUBLE:

Power and Rockleigh.

POST HORN AND ISDES

Best Bets at Newton Abbot Jumping Meeting

ENTRIES were so numerous for the one-day meeting at Newton Abbot that it has been necessary to divide one race, the South Devon Handicap Steeplechase. Southern Hero, Carefree and Away are a likely group against the field in Division One of the event. Carefree ran an excellent race when third to Red Rower and Roi d'Egypte at Cheltenham before finishing unplaced behind Bashful Boy at Fontwell Park. He is fancied again, but I do not think he will beat who retains his form remarkably well despite his fifteen years. He defeated all but Le Cygne at Newbury before his second to Golden Luck at Gatwick, and I fully expect him to carry top weight successfully.

POST HORN,

winner of three races this season, is preferred to Greek Life in Division Two of the South Devon Steeplechase.

The Lindbridge Handicap Steeplechase affords

KNIGHT O' LONDON

an excellent chance to improve on his second to Tragedian at Stratford-on-Avon on last month. Steel End and the lightly-weighted Mac Secundus are the dangers.

Stable advices are favourable concerning for the Ugbrooke Handicap Hurdle, and as he will be suited by the distance—two miles and a half—I expect him to win from Scole.

MOUNTAIN RANGER,

who was fourth in his two last races, may have most to fear from Right and Fair in the Elmhurst Novices' Hurdle.

CUSTOM HOUSE

may complete a double for Rimell in the Newton Abbot Steeplechase, and Nocib holds a good winning chance in the Brookside Handicap Hurdle.

WESTERN STABLES WIN TWO RACES

Sen Toi and Macidas Score at Longford: P. Sleator's Double

MANY improvements have been made at the Longford Course since last year's meeting, notably the erection of a substantial new stand, which proved quite adequate to accommodate the big crowd present. Not for many years was there more attractive racing seen at the venue, and, even though favourites invariably fared badly, the sport was of such an exhilarating character as to atone for such disappointments.

The Sligo winner, Allez Au Diable, was expected to follow up that success by winning the Longford Cup, but after leading for nearly two miles he dropped back beaten, and Sarawaki, then taking command, easily held off Mylep and Dakota Star in the straight.

Mrs. R. G. Maxwell, whose colours are new to Irish racing, won the Trial Plate with Vonester, and was, perhaps, lucky to do so, as Charon, the favourite, who was badly placed at the last turn, was travelling very fast at the finish, and only suffered a head defeat.

The Greenfield Steeplechase, the chief race of the afternoon, attracted a field of eight runners, and provided a splendid finish between Sen Toi, Persian Rose and Call Him, who finished in the order named. The winner, who is trained by his owner in County Sligo, was ridden by Mr. R. W. Browne, and the success was a very popular one. So far not a single favourite had proved successful, and matters were not improved for backers when Two Irish Eyes failed to finish in the first three in the Town Plate, the race being won in easy style by Mr. T. P. Downes, riding his own horse, Golden View II., who had previously scored at Navan. Mr. H. C. Bourke, of Ballina, whose colours have been familiar to racegoers for many years back, won the much-coveted Granard Cup with Macidas, who had run on both days at Punchestown, yet turned out now as fresh as ever. Jackbook had an easy task in the Stayers' Plate, and credited Mr. P. Sleator, jun., with a double event. Details:—

NEWMARKET NOTES

Tutor in Form for Manchester: England's Glory One to Note

NEWMARKET, Tuesday.

AMONG the gallops to come under observation this morning on the Racecourse side were one or two which were enlightening as to the prospects of horses holding engagements in the near future. The Park Lodge trainer, Jack Jarvis, gave his Manchester Cup candidate, Tutor, a good pace gallop over one mile and five furlongs in company with Flyon. Tutor should have a good following, as he proved his partiality for the Castle Irwell course when winning the November Handicap. Flyon is likely to have his first outing of the season in the White Rose Stakes at Hurst Park next Tuesday, and, even though it will not be an ideal course for Lord Milford's strapping chestnut, it may be remembered that he ran a good race there last year when third to Portmarnock and Fairchance in the Hyperion Stakes in August.

Others of J. Jarvis's team were engaged in good pace spins over various distances. Hippius seems to have derived much benefit from his two previous races this season. Although he did not trouble the 2,000 Guineas winner, Djebel, he was always conspicuous, and should be a danger to the best in the Newmarket Stakes a fortnight hence.

The Jubilee candidates, Bold Devil and Admiral's Walk, were given a striding mile gallop with Challenge. Although Admiral's Walk will have benefited from his race behind Hypnotist here last week, I am not sure that he will prove better at the weights than Bold Devil.

G. Barling gave Noble Turk (J. Simpson) a fast stripped gallop over seven and a half furlongs with Chambrella, Gallalane (Edgeley) and White Lady.

Basil Jarvis trains a promising colt in England's Glory, who moved well this morning in a good mile gallop with Malay Bride and The Pelican. Probably I shall be recommending him as a winner in due course, although it may be that he will do better following public experience. British Empire fell from grace by his failure in the Craven Stakes, but he is likely to recover some of his prestige over short cuts. He galloped as well as ever over five furlongs with Mark Buoy this morning. He is engaged in the Sprint Stakes, to be decided over that distance, at the next Newmarket meeting.

Captain Boyd-Rochfort sent his Jubilee candidate, Hypnotist (Beasley), with Casanova (Stephenson), Grand Union, Longriggan and Comptroller, one mile and a quarter at a useful rate on Water Hall.

Golden Tiger (Beasley) and Fair Test (Stephenson), who are both in the Newmarket Stakes, had a striding pace mile spin with Foxbrough II.

Earl's Heliopolis, Lighthouse II. and Peace Offering had a nice pace ten furlongs spin. Heliopolis and Lighthouse II. both ran below expectations at our last fixture, but they should win for Lord Derby before the season is far advanced. Lighthouse II. may attempt to prove in the Newmarket Stakes that his form in the "Guineas" was far from being true.

IRISH HARD COURT CHAMPIONSHIPS

SEMI-FINALISTS IN MEN'S SINGLES

P. Read, A. E. Fannin and H. J. Ryan joined R. E. Egan in the semi-final of the men's singles in the Irish Hard Court Championships at Elm Park yesterday. Egan will now meet Read and Fannin will oppose Ryan for the places in the final.

The three successful quarter-finalists yesterday each lost the first set before coming through. Ryan had, perhaps, the narrowest escape; for he was two games down to G. P. Jackson in the final set, saved two game points in the next, and one in the fourth game, thus he levelled the games at two-all when he might have been four games down. However, he profited by these escapes, to find his very best form in the remaining games, and ran out a winner at 6-3.

Jackson, a semi-finalist in last year's Junior Championship, put up a very fine fight and showed himself to be really promising. He was fortunate in finding Ryan completely out of sorts with his back-hand in the first set, but after that he made the international fight for every point, and there were some very interesting rallies of deep driving. Ryan, however, could summon up more pace, and this made the difference in the end, while to the winner's credit it must be added that he saved those vital points in the final set with good shots.

Read and Porter also had a tremendously keen battle, in which the loser, like Jackson, had his chances for victory. He also led 2-0 in the final set, had a point for 3-1, which Read saved with a fine cross-court passing shot, and had another point to lead 4-3. Again his young opponent brought out a winner, on the volley this time, and went on to take the match without further loss. It was a contest of steadiness, and though Read was generally keeping the better length he almost went down before Porter's gallant retrieving.

Getting both pace and clever angles on the fore-hand, E. H. Maynard kept Fannin well on the move throughout the first set, but subsequently the latter found a perfect length and pinned his opponent to the base-line to take the second and third sets for the loss of only three games. Results:—

MEN'S SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIP—Quarter-finals.
P. Read beat E. H. Porter—2-6, 6-4, 6-3; A. E. Fannin beat E. H. Maynard—4-6, 6-1, 6-2; H. J. Ryan beat G. P. Jackson—2-6, 6-3, 6-3.

WOMEN'S SINGLES—First Round.
Miss M. Sweetman beat Miss S. Hunt—6-2, 6-2; Miss M. Houlihan w.o., Miss B. Greene scr.

Second Round.

CARLOW'S CHALLENGE

The Monaghan Cup Match at Carrick-on-Suir

(By PAT O.)

CARLOW has played such a lowly part in leagues and championships that few suspected they would extend the 1938 Leinster champions in a title match. It is true that Graiguecullen, on the Leix border, sent out fine club teams from time to time, and the newly-equipped park at Carlow has given a strong impetus to local players. That they could extend Leix was just a pious hope. Not alone did they extend them; they were on the offensive from end to end.

The scores were level three times, and twice Carlow were in front. Once again it was the combined resource of the Delaney brothers, of Stradbally, that pulled the game round in Leix's favour.

CARLOW SURPRISE THEIR SUPPORTERS

Michael, John, Chris. and Willie were the backbone of the Midland side, and the three attackers drove home the winning scores with characteristic efforts. Carlow surprised their own supporters by their speed and dash. Had they combined better around goal, victory was assured, as their kicking was long and accurate, whilst the fielding was secure and confident. Leix were surprised at the unexpected challenge, and were a shade lucky to qualify for the second championship round. They are listed to play Wexford at Carlow on June 9th.

Westmeath hurlers have recovered some of the promise which brought them the junior championship a few years back. Since coming to senior ranks they had a lean time, but they hurled smartly against Meath at Mullingar. The old Army star—Steve Hegarty—was of good assistance to them on Sunday; White, Skehal and Gavigan, of Young Irelands, Dublin, also lent a hand in a decisive Westmeath win.

Tipperary and Limerick qualified for the Thomond Cup final at the Ennis Road grounds, after typical Munster hurling, in which pace and quality was of the championship standard. The Cork v. Limerick game was brimful of bright passages. Cork were short four of their regular side owing to the local game between Sarsfields and Midleton. Limerick tried the two U.C.D. men—Dave Hurley and Dick Stokes. Otherwise they were at full strength, and the Dublin visitors showed much promise. When it is decided to play Stokes on Limerick's left wing, the University man will prove his worth. He lifts and hits at lightning pace, and is cool in an emergency. It is proposed to try McCarthy and Wall, of U.C.D., at an early stage. Mackey's team have a few vacancies to fill before they meet Waterford at Killarney in their championship game on June 16th. Quirke again headed the Cork scoring with 1 goal 3 points, and the Mackey brothers and McMahon accounted for Limerick's majority.

AN IDEAL VENUE

Tipperary had only four of their regular side. As usual, in Thomond Feis games, North Tipperary filled the major part with John Maher, J. Cooney, and the Doyles from the South. Clare had quite a young team, and they played so well that their championship hopes brighten. They have time to improve with a bye in the first round. Two quick goals to Clare on resuming put Tipperary in arrears, only to stage a typical finish, in which Cooney and Flanagan notched the vital scores. Munster talent is very evenly distributed between five counties.

Over the Whit week-end Carrick-on-Suir will have a novel feature. The Monaghan Cup has been played in London annually between the leading hurling counties, who travel to support the game in London. War conditions have left no London grounds available, so the game has been transferred to Davin Park, Carrick-on-Suir. It is an ideal venue for this Kilkenny v. Tipperary game.

I learn that both counties are fielding full championship sides, and the ground should lend itself to fast hurling. A big company will travel from London.

Eoghan Ruadh's win over Young Irelands in the first round of the senior hurling championship was a big surprise. Young Irelands only realised their danger at the three-quarter hour. They played a whirlwind finish, and reduced the margin from ten points to three. Eoghan Ruadh are a product of the Dublin primary schools at Bolton street. They have twelve native Dublin hurlers, who played well, and had the necessary balance from the three Army players—Daniels, McCormack and McSweeney (2 goals). Young Irelands were genuinely beaten, but the absence of their leader—T. Treacy (injured)—put their attack out of gear. U.C.D. teams will go well this season in both codes.

PRESS ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING

MR. JAMES HENDERSON ELECTED CHAIRMAN

Mr. H. J. Staines, Chairman of the Press Association, and Managing Director of Sheffield Newspapers, Ltd., presided at the seventy-second annual meeting of the members of the Press Association, held yesterday in the Association's chief offices, 85 Fleet street, London. He described the arrangements made immediately on the outbreak of war to supplement the Association's already comprehensive news services by a rapid and sufficient supply of information about the war. He referred to the financial burdens falling upon newspapers in time of war, remarking that it was only in times of peace that both newspapers and news agencies could order their affairs most prosperously.

During the past year, said Mr. Staines, the Association had entered into occupation of its fine new building in Fleet street. This was also the chief office of Reuter's, Ltd., so that the leading British news agencies in both the home and the international fields now had a worthy headquarters.

Proposing the adoption of the annual report and accounts, Mr. Staines expressed his thanks to his colleagues on the Board and to the officers and staff of the Association, and also mentioned the retirement, on December 31, 1939, of the former secretary, Mr. P. A. Shaw, who had given forty-seven years of loyal service to the Association, and on his retirement received presentations from the directors and from the staff.

The report and accounts were adopted, and the retiring director, Mr. Samuel Storey, M.P., Sunderland Echo, was re-elected, on the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Allan Jeans, Liverpool Post and Echo, Ltd.

A cordial vote of thanks to the Chairman was passed, on the motion of Mr. Harold R. Grime, West Lancashire Evening Gazette, Blackpool, seconded by Mr. W. H. Armitt, News Chronicle, Manchester.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Association immediately following the general meeting, Mr. James Henderson, Belfast News Letter, was unanimously elected Chairman for the ensuing year, on the proposal of Mr. Staines, seconded by Mr. Alex McLean Ewing, Glasgow Herald.

Mr. Henderson said that his family had had a close connection with the Press Association since its foundation in 1868. His grandfather, Mr. J. A. Henderson, was a founder-member, and for some years served on the Consultative Board, while his uncle, Mr. Charles W. Henderson, was a past-Chairman.

Mr. Ewing was re-elected Vice-Chairman.

The Finance Committee was re-elected as follows:—Mr. W. Raymond Derwent, Telegraph and Argus, Bradford; Mr. F. C. Whittaker, Scarborough Evening News, and Mr. W. J. Haley, Manchester Evening News.

STATE CLAIM FOR £5,250

When reference was made at the Dublin Corporation meeting on Monday night to the State claim of £5,250 compensation against the Corporation under the Malicious Injuries Act, Mr. Ignatius Rice, Law Agent, said: "We can fight it, and we will."

FRENCH WAR COMMUNIQUE

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

PARIS, Tuesday.

To-night's official French communiqué states: Artillery actions to the west of the Vosges.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

MR. O'BRIEN LEAVES CORK UNITED

Cork United F.C. and Mr. Michael O'Brien, their secretary-manager since the reorganisation of the club, are parting company. Mr. O'Brien, in reply to an offer of the position of manager-trainer, informed the club directors that he disagreed with the board's proposed change, which would exclude him from board meetings and prevent him directing the policy of the club. Accordingly, he tendered his resignation, which the directors accepted with regret. Mr. O'Brien is leaving Ireland shortly, but thinks he may return for next football season.

KEEPING HOUSES FOR "NATIVES"

DUN LAOGHAIRE MOTIONS

At Dun Laoghaire Corporation last night, Mr. P. Fitzgerald submitted a resolution requesting the Borough Manager to give preference in the allocation of Corporation houses to persons who have been over five years' residents in the borough. He also proposed that Rathdown Board of Assistance request the Minister to make the period of residence qualification equal in the case of unemployment assistance and home assistance.

Both resolutions were adopted.

Mr. Fitzgerald said that the countryman was welcome, provided the needs of their own people were met first.

Mr. J. P. Dooge said that they should ensure that natives of the borough got houses before strangers.

Mr. T. Morgan Good said that people earning very much under £2 a week had to pay as much as 10s. and 13s. a week for accommodation. He suggested that they should have all these apartments and self-contained flats properly valued. Tenements should not be allowed to grow up in their principal residential squares.

Mr. M. Dockrell said that slum tenements were at the root of the problem.

Mr. T. C. O'Mahony, Borough Manager, said that the Corporation had its hands full endeavouring to find houses.

COMPANY'S REPLY TO UNION CLAIMS

QUESTION OF FIXED WORKING WEEK

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE BLACK.)

The hearing was resumed of the actions brought on behalf of the National Union of Railwaymen seeking declarations to enforce agreements regulating working hours, conditions and rates of pay of its members employed in the workshops of the Great Southern Railways Company's road transport business and in the railway workshops at Inchicore.

As regards the road transport section employés, the union stated that by an agreement of February 15, 1935, provision was made for a forty-seven-hour working week. The agreement, they stated, was terminable only by six months' notice, but in October, 1938, the working week had been reduced from six days of forty-seven hours to five days of forty-two and a half hours for eleven weeks, without notice having been given to terminate the agreement.

In the case of the railway shopmen, it was pleaded that in October, 1938, their working week was reduced from five days to four and a half days for eleven weeks, in breach of agreements of November and December, 1932.

The company pleaded, among other matters, that, owing to its financial position, it became necessary in the autumn of 1938 to reduce expenditure on salaries and wages; that agreements arrived at for that purpose were in substitution for any former agreements, and that any rights which the N.U.R. might have had under the earlier agreements had been waived.

Mr. Lavery, K.C., Mr. Brereton Barry, K.C., and Mr. A. Corbett (instructed by Messrs. Joseph Gleeson and Co.) appeared for the N.U.R.; and Mr. Phelps, K.C., Mr. E. J. Kelly, K.C., and Mr. J. Healy (instructed by Mr. W. Gordon Bradley) for the Great Southern Railways Company.

Mr. Phelps, resuming his address on behalf of the Great Southern Railways Company, said that the only words in the agreement of February, 1935, which could possibly lend any colour whatever to the contention of a guaranteed forty-seven hours were the words: "Forty-seven hours per week will constitute a working week." As long as the company had the work to give the men and the money to pay them they were given forty-seven hours. There never was any contract with any single individual to give forty-seven hours per week. The alterations made were alterations contemplated by the agreement, and dealt with by the agreement, which fixed the rates of pay, the different shifts, and overtime and conditions of service. On the terms of the agreement it was wrong in law to construe it as being a contract to give any stated or fixed term of work per week.

Mr. W. H. Morton, General Manager of the Great Southern Railways Company, was examined by Mr. Kelly in regard to the practical and commercial aspects of the agreements.

At the conclusion of Mr. Morton's evidence, Mr. Kelly, K.C., said that the Great Southern Railways Company always had given the men as much work as possible, consistent with the needs of the undertaking and with its financial position.

The further hearing was adjourned until to-day.

LAND RETURNED TO COMMISSION

PURCHASE AGREEMENT BROKEN

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MARTIN MAGUIRE.)

An appeal of the Irish Land Commission was allowed from a judgment of the Circuit Court dismissing their claim for possession of part of the lands at Ballymadrough, near Swords, an agreement for the purchase of which had been entered into with them by a landless labourer, William Scully.

Mr. W. H. Carson, K.C., who, with Mr. Tadhg Mac Firbhisigh (instructed by Mr. W. J. O'Reilly), appeared for the Irish Land Commission, said that the Land Commission required the person acquiring the land to sign an agreement that he would not assign or sublet any portion of the land. William Scully made such an agreement on March 29, 1934. Scully died on January 24, 1937, and letters of administration of his personal estate were granted to his widow, Jane. She subsequently made a letting to Thomas Dooley. In January, 1939, she married a farm labourer and was now Jane Andrews, and since had been living with him and his mother about twelve miles from the land.

Mr. Nolan Whelan, K.C., who, with Mr. O'Doherty (instructed by Mr. Gerrard L. McGowan), appeared for Mrs. Andrews, Bodenstown, Clonalvy, Co. Dublin, and Thomas Dooley, Ballymadrough, the defendants in the civil bill, stated that the letting was a conacre letting, and he submitted that there had been no breach of agreement.

Mr. Justice Martin Maguire held that the letting to Thomas Dooley was a breach of a clause of the agreement, and that the failure of the late William Scully and his wife to till the land was a breach of another clause. While he had great sympathy with Mrs. Andrews, he saw no reason, he said, why public money should be spent in large sums to put people in possession of land if they had no intention to work it themselves in accordance with the provisions of the Act. He gave a decree for possession.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

MONEYLENDERS' APPEALS

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

The judge allowed appeals by Simon Mofsovitz, 34 Exchequer street; David Jacob, 53 Clarendon street, and Harris Stein, 9 Aungier street, for renewals of their moneylending licences.

With the exception of Stein's case, all of them had been opposed by Mr. George Griffin, 7 Slane road, Crumlin, who was represented by Mr. D. Bell (instructed by Mr. Maurice Veale). In Stein's case opposition came from the police, represented by Mr. D. O'Donovan (Chief State Solicitor's office).

Mr. C. Lavery, K.C., and Mr. Hamill (instructed by Mr. V. Elyan) appeared for the appellants.

The appeal of Leo Lynn, 9 Donore terrace, was adjourned until the July Sessions.

INJURY CLAIM SETTLED

A settlement for £94 and costs was announced in the case in which James Dee, an insurance official, of 256 Griffith avenue, Drumcondra, sued Richard Somers, Kellegar, Enniskerry, Co. Wicklow, for damages for personal injuries sustained when the plaintiff was knocked down by defendant's car.

Mr. D. Fawsitt, K.C., and Mr. S. Fawsitt (instructed by Mr. W. B. Fawsitt) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Robert Hogan (instructed by Messrs. Good and Murray) appeared for the defendant.

IRISH RELIEF FIGURES INCREASED

The total number of persons (men, women and children) in receipt of public assistance under the Poor Law on the last Saturday of January, 1940, was 111,956, which is 11,438 more than the previous month and 8,745 more than on the corresponding day last year. The total is equivalent to 38.1 per 1,000 of the estimated population.

The number of persons in receipt of home assistance was 92,709 or 10,318 more than the previous month and 8,945 more than on the corresponding day last year. The average cost of home assistance was £12,850 per week or £105 less than in the previous month and £807 more per week than in January, 1939.

The numbers on home assistance in Dublin City and County were 38.5 per cent. of the total on home assistance.

The above figures relate only to persons who were receiving home assistance or were maintained in County Homes, hospitals and extern institutions by Poor Law authorities. The following classes are not included, namely, persons receiving medical relief only at dispensaries, sick persons attended in their own homes by dispensary officers, and patients in public mental hospitals.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HOSPITALS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The discontent in the hospitals' programme under the Local Government Department and Hospital Commissions is very evident. The hospital, the local authorities and the public are undoubtedly extremely disappointed in the very limited results achieved, as compared with promises.

The impression one gets from "Fair Play's" letter is that he is fully aware of the complete discontent with the Civil Service methods of administration in the hospitals' programme, but his attitude towards the matter appears remarkably similar to that of the ostrich, except that strange bird is at least content not to defend itself. He stresses, with most considerable effort, the necessity for experience in dealing with the hospitals' programme, and upon this point I am most strongly in agreement with him. He admits that there are a number of competent architects and engineers in this country, but he states that for the most part they have little or no experience of large-scale works. This, again, I agree, is true to some extent, but in the first place, for architects and engineers who know their job, and there are quite a considerable number of us in Eire, the size of the job makes very little difference if possessed of experience, training and capital, and yet, on the other hand, if "Fair Play's" argument is that big works cannot be administered without the great experience which he appears to suggest is necessary, perhaps, he could inform us if there is anyone in the Local Government Department or the Hospitals' Commission who has anything like as much experience of actual works as the men outside. A very large proportion of the delay that has taken place in schemes which have actually begun, and they are comparatively few, has been due to the complete lack of experience of the civil servants in practical administration of building as against theory. It would be interesting if a few of the contractors who have had experience in building hospitals would express their views on this point of mine, they will, I think, agree that chaos has been caused by civil servants altering established building practice regardless of consequences, which have time and again been pointed out to them without avail.

"Fair Play" states that the Department very properly appointed men of long practical experience to supervise, direct and control the works undertaken. What does he mean by this point? Are those men technical civil servants, or are they men who are in private practice? If he means they are civil servants he is wrong; there are no men of other than very limited practical experience of hospital work in the Civil Service.

Architects are asked to be grateful to the Department for facilities which the Civil Service offer. He goes on to enumerate the matters for which they should be grateful. If we architects were proferred suggestions we probably would be grateful, but the so-called suggestions are in the form of dictation for which the Civil Service will afterwards accept no responsibility when their schemes turn out wrongly, which they very often do. The unfortunate architects in private practice are then blamed by medical services and the public, who are not conversant with the actual direction to which we are forced to submit or be held up indefinitely.

I do not think that necessarily the engineering and the architectural sections of the Local Government Department are entirely to blame—they have their extreme difficulties too, as, apart from their lack of experience, they frequently cannot get any finality of requirements from the medical sections, or, in other words, the medical authorities and doctors themselves do not know what they want, and if one wants one, then the other requests a completely different solution to the same problem. It is impossible for architects to have a complete knowledge of the intricacies of the medical world as well as their own job, which is difficult enough.

"Fair Play" condemns the study of foreign hospitals and the application of the result of such study to a solution of the hospital problems of our own. A great many architects in this country have made a point of visiting and studying many Continental and American hospitals, and whilst we do not for a moment suggest that any such things that we have seen necessarily apply in their completeness to the problems here, there will be no progress made here unless we are for once tolerant enough to admit that some people may have progressed further than we have, where nothing of any consequence in hospital building had been done for many years. The Local Government Department has a strong tendency to insist upon a standard of planning and construction which is far below that required under modern conditions, and, despite all the money available, and the wonderful opportunity, the new hospitals here are already being found to be out of date and deficient in amenities.

The whole truth of the matter is that in those sections of the Civil Service which have been created to control us, we utterly irresponsible architects, there is almost without exception (there are one or two) nobody in the position of making a clear-cut decision, backed up by any real knowledge of the subject which they have to administer, and I believe that the slow progress now taking place is due largely to the realisation that bad mistakes have been made, and the knowledge to amend is still lacking.

"Fair Play" states that the civil servant cannot answer for himself, and to attack is unfair, but I wonder how many of the architects in this country who have been doing hospital work would dare speak their minds without restraint and not feel with every reason that the consequences upon them would be severe when their next hospital job comes under consideration by the Civil Service.

The architects who have had anything to do with the hospital work entered into it with great interest, and so did the unfortunate board and committees, who promoted the schemes, but at the end of about ten years we are all of us, from top to tail, completely fed up with the waste of time, waste of money, and the extremely poor progress towards anything material.

As for the sick poor, and the sicklier sentiments which "Fair Play" expresses, I believe, and, I know it is the belief of many others, that they do not really matter at all to the Civil Service; some very remunerative sources of income have been created by the sweepstake for the State, and a number of individuals, and the less money is spent on hospitals the longer such sources of income will remain.—Yours, etc.,

E. LIONEL CROSBY,
A.R.I.B.A., M.R.I.A.I.

DECREE GIVEN FOR COAL PURCHASE

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

Allowing a set off for £35, judgment for £418 odd was given in favour of J. E. Sharrock and Co., Ltd., Rumford place, Liverpool, in their action against Jacob Cohen, trading as the Diamond Coal Co., D'Olier street, Dublin, for £453 odd, the price of coal delivered to him in March of last year.

Mr. Cohen's defence was that the coal was of a quality inferior to that which Messrs. Sharrock warranted, and he counter-claimed damages for alleged breach of warranty and for loss of custom.

The counter-claim was dismissed.

Mr. Kingsmill Moore, K.C., and Mr. W. Hamill (instructed by Messrs. Porter, Morris and Co.) appeared for Messrs. Sharrock; and Mr. Frank FitzGibbon, K.C.; Mr. Paul McCarthy, K.C., and Mr. S. Crivon (instructed by Mr. Ernest Newman) for Mr. Cohen.

VICTUALLING BUSINESS FOR SALE

An interesting property is advertised for sale by Messrs. Battersby and Co., of 39 Westmoreland street. "McDonagh's," of Chatham street, one of the oldest and best known victualling businesses in Dublin, was established early in the last century in No. 11 Chatham street, and the business rapidly developed to such an extent that Nos. 12 and 13 were subsequently acquired and the business extended thereto, and at the present time it is one of the most extensive and best equipped premises of its kind in Ireland. Situate within a few yards from Grafton street, its convenience appeals to a very wide clientele and, apart from this, the company has always had very extensive and valuable contracts for the principal hotels, institutions, military barracks, etc., in and around Dublin. By Royal Warrant they were purveyors to the Viceregal Lodge for many years. The present owners feel that a business of the kind requires more energetic management and constant supervision than they are able to devote to it for the future, and are retiring for this reason alone. It is understood that the auctioneers have received numerous inquiries since the property came on the market.

Newry Petition.—Able-bodied recipients of outdoor relief in Newry have forwarded a petition to the local Board of Guardians, saying that they decided to make the petition chiefly on behalf of their children, whose hunger and hardships had become almost intolerable owing to the meagre relief which they receive being in no way adequate to meet the high rise in the cost of living due to the war.

Kirkintilloch Disaster Fund.—All those who were entitled to cash payments in accordance with the scheme settled by Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy for the administration of this fund have received cheques for the appropriate amounts. At a meeting of parents, dependents and survivors a resolution was adopted thanking the editors and staffs of the Irish Times and other newspapers for the prompt and generous appeal they made for funds; the public who generously subscribed to the funds, and all who assisted in collecting and handling this money. They also thanked all who sent telegrams and letters of sympathy, and who assisted them with the funeral arrangements.

Galway Girl's Death.—A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday on Annie Curran, aged twenty-six years, of Ballinahown, County Galway, employed at Cappagh, Clondalkin, who had cycled out of a gateway at Cappaghmore, Clondalkin, and came into collision with a motor lorry driven by John Finn, of Nangor road, Clondalkin, and owned by the Weatherwell Tile Company. The jury exonerated the driver from blame. Mr. John A. Cullen (Messrs. Little and Cullen) appeared for the next-of-kin; Mr. W. P. Corrigan (Messrs. Corrigan and Corrigan) appeared for the owners and driver of the lorry; Superintendent Mooney represented the police.

SALE OF WORK

Lady Maffey, wife of the United Kingdom Representative to Eire, opened the Hibernian Bible Society's Sale of Work, held yesterday at 42 Dawson street, Dublin, in aid of Foreign Colporteurs.

The enthusiastic way in which the sale was supported was a tribute to the energetic work of the Hon. Secretaries, Mrs. Alfred E. Elvidge and the Rev. L. L. Sullivan, M.A.

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE

GILT-EDGED ISSUES SUPPORTED

BRITISH INDUSTRIALS STEADIER

With the outlook still so clouded there was no improvement in trading on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, and the tendency was to await events before opening up new commitments. However, there was some small improvement in sentiment, and leading British Industrials presented a slightly steadier appearance in many directions. Most investors were still playing for safety, and consequently the gilt-edged groups attracted good support, and firm conditions were again in evidence.

There was steady buying of Home Government Funds, and Financial Agreement Loan rose further to 99½, and other issues held steady. British Funds continued in favour, and War Loan rose 5s. to 100 11/16.

Corporation Stocks were also in request, and Cork 4 per Cent. 1933 Loan spurted 3 11/16 points to 94½, and Dublin Port and Docks 4 per Cent. gained nearly a point at 93½.

Banks held up well, but, exceptionally, Nationals shaded off to 41s., Guinness Ordinary repeated 77s. 3d., and Cairnes Preference moved up to 13s. 6d.

In Rails the recent offering of Great Northern Guaranteed resulted in a sharp fall of four points to 25. Great Southern issues marked small and irregular changes.

Dublin Tram Preference and Alliance Gas Ordinary shaded off, but Todd Burns Debenture jumped 7s. 3d. to 65s. Smyth and Co. Ordinary declined to 14s. 6d., but other changes were few and far between.

A harder trend was evident in Textiles. Coats Ordinary moved up to 36s. 9d., Courtaulds to 37s. 6d., and English Sewing Cotton Ordinary changed hands at 31s. 1½d.

Tobaccos continued dull, and B.A.T. Ordinary fell several pence to 103s. 6d., and Imperials lost 1s. at 112s. 6d. Carreras "B" Ordinary hardened to 12s.

Dunlop Rubbers and Vickers Ordinary tended higher, but Imperial Chemical Ordinary eased to 31s. 6d. Ever Ready (Great Britain) Ordinary were dealt in at 26s.

ANNUAL MEETING

At the annual general meeting of the Dublin Stock Exchange, Mr. B. A. Morrison, of Messrs. Morrison and Symes, was unanimously re-elected President for the current year. Mr. G. L. Kennedy is again Vice-President, and Mr. W. J. Hamilton, Hon. Treasurer. The other vacancies are filled by Messrs. T. A. Brindley, W. A. Clarke, H. J. Franklin, J. D. Fitzgerald, O. Murphy and W. J. Tunney.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE

WHY BRITISH FUNDS ARE SOARING

IRREGULAR TREND IN OTHER SECTIONS

RENEWED buying of British Government securities on an active and widespread scale provided the outstanding feature of the London Stock Markets yesterday, and the resultant advance in quotations took the old War Loan to its war-time peak of 101¼, and the new 3 per cent. War Loan to 100⅝—a 6s. 3d. premium on the issue price.

Few developments of interest were noticeable in other directions, however, and prices generally pursued an uncertain course, business being held in check by political influences.

Gilt-edged were in the ascendant from the start, and sustained re-investment rapidly gave the whole market a strong appearance, the advance in prices being accentuated by the fact that floating supplies of stock were by no means large. Final levels were higher almost without exception, and, while Old Consols showed to particular advantage at 76, Local Loans, at 88⅞, had a rise of a point. Dominion and Colonial issues were sympathetically firm, and eventually showed fresh rises of ¼ to ½.

FRENCH RENTES RISE

The foreign market remained subdued, but Japanese Bonds held firm at the lower levels reached on the previous day, and most Chinese Loans were maintained. Europeans also gave an improved display, Czech 8 per cent. rallying to 37, whilst French 4 per cents. strengthened to 10½. On the other hand, Brazilians remained off colour, and concluded with losses ranging up to 1½, by which amount the Funding of 1898 dropped to 31½.

Interest in British Rails failed to undergo any expansion, and further scattered sales supplied the bulk of the day's turnover. The fresh rise in gilt-edged helped the market to resist liquidation, but, even so, fractional losses were fairly common at the close. Great Western further eased to 44½, at which level a fall of ½ was recorded, whilst L.M.S. Ord. and Southern Defd. both shed ⅛ to 21⅛ and 19⅞, respectively. Foreign Rails were idle, and unable to shake off their recent dull tendency, and, among Colonials, Canadas sagged from 8¼ to 8⅛.

Sentiment in the Industrial market was not materially influenced by the favourable employment return, but, following a rather dull opening, the tone improved slightly, and, with a little support forthcoming, some of the leaders were able to finish with modest improvements.

Mines experienced a continuance of very quiet conditions.

SOME INDUSTRIALS MOVE UP

BUT GENERAL TREND IS LOWER

Political influence produced another dull session in the Industrial market, though just before the close a little improvement was noticeable among some of the leading equities. For the most part, prices continued to sag, and, despite a mild rally, several small declines were recorded on balance.

Among the issues to receive support were Woolworths, which finished at 58s. after being down to 56s. 9d. Marks and Spencer steadied from 39s. 9d. to 40s. 9d., while O.K. Bazaars strengthened to 27s., Dunlops to 33s. 3d., Associated Cements to 2⅝, and J. and P. Coats to 37s.

Iron, Coal and Steel shares remained uncertain. Buyers, however, were still about for Neepsends, which hardened further to 21s. 3d. On the other hand, B.S.A., Babcocks, John Brown, Clarke Chapman, Wm. Cory, Sheepbridge, Shipley, Vickers, Tube Investments and Swan Hunters all lost ground, the last-named closing 1s. down at 34s.

Aircrafts and Motors ruled quietly firm, with A.E.C. the turn harder at 1 11/16 following the interim dividend. Electricals continued dull. Among Breweries, South African Ord. improved to 111s., but Watney Defd. sagged to 47s. Guinness repeated 78s. Apart from Gallahers, which rallied to 5 1/16, the Tobacco leaders closed slightly easier. "Bats" eased 1/16 to 5 1/16, while Carreras fell ⅛ to 4 11/16.

J. and P. Coats gained 4½d., but British Cottons fell 7½d. and Bleachers eased the turn. Courtaulds were maintained, but British Celanese shed 1½d. In other directions, Cerebos gave way further to 8 1/16, Cable and Wireless Ord. to 55, and British Oxygen to 3 7/16. Supporting orders were, however, received for Beechams Defd., "Emmies," Michael Nairns, Imperial Chemicals and Wall Paper Defd.

LATE RALLY IN OILS

The dull conditions which had prevailed on Monday continued in evidence among Oils until within about an hour of the close, when a rally was witnessed among the leading counters.

"Shells," which opened dull around 3¼, finished with a gain of 1/16 at 3 11/16. Similarly Royal Dutch, which in the early hours were no better than 25, left off at 25½, although this still showed a loss of ½. Shell Unions, however, moved up $¼ to $15⅞. During the morning Anglo-Iranians weakened to 2 9/16, but they were finally 1/16 up at 2⅝. Burmahs touched 3 11/16, but closed unchanged at 3¼. As for some time past, the Eagle issues commanded little attention, and, although Mexicans recovered to 6s. 3d., Canadians remained dull at 7s. 10½d. There was little doing in the Trinidad group. T.P.D. hardened to 46s. 6d., but Apex and United British finished easier. Elsewhere British Controlled Preference sagged to 4s. 4½d.

YAM SENG FIRMER

There was a slightly firmer tendency in the Rubber share market, but business remained on a disappointingly small scale. The recent rise in the commodity, however, was beginning to have effect. Selling dwindled to negligible proportions, and some of the leading issues attracted modest support, though this was seldom reflected in prices. One or two of the low-priced issues also were inquired for, among them being Yam Seng, which gained 1½d. to 2s.

MINES GENERALLY EASIER

THE BARRIERS WEAKEN ON TAX DOUBTS

With business continuing to dwindle prices generally followed an easier trend in the Mining market yesterday.

As on Monday the majority of movements in Kaffirs were downward, despite the persistence of a certain demand for a few of the dividend-payers. The Cape was reported as dull, but prices, however, here did not permit of any serious arbitrage.

Developing Mines continued to show some hesitancy, and, thus, in the Far Westerns, W. Holdings further weakened 7½d. to 14s. 6d. and W. Deep 4½d. to 17s. 6d. Earlier, however, both issues had been 3d. or so below these levels. A few fractional losses occurred among the Producers, Geduld sagging 1/16 to 7 11/16, Grootvlei 1/16 to 5 1/16, and Modder East a similar fraction to 4⅝.

West Africans were still dull, Ashantis further receding 1/16 to 2 11/16, and Bibiani 6d. to 20s. 9d.

Diamond shares were barely maintained.

Under the continued influence of Australian taxation uncertainties, there was fresh offering on local account of the Barriers. Broken Hill Props. weakened to 34s. 9d. and Souths to 19s. 4½d., while Norths closed notably dull at 31s. 3d. Among the Miscellaneous, Lead Zincs Trepca were an uncertain market at 2s. 9d., reflecting the tension in the Balkans. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET

IMPROVEMENT IN "FREE" EXCHANGE RATES

The further decline in "free" sterling to yet another fresh low level of 3.38⅛ dollars was the outstanding development in the London Money Market yesterday. In the discount market conditions were absolutely unchanged, with plentiful credit available at ½ to 1 per cent. and an active clearing bank demand for bills. The August 1 maturity will become available for purchase by the clearing banks to-day.

The silver market was quiet and featureless, both cash and forward easing 1/16d. to 21d. and 20 15/16d., respectively.

Official rates of exchange were unchanged, but the overnight slump of 6 cents in "free" sterling was reflected in a sharp improvement in many of the "free" market rates quoted in London. Outstanding movements were a jump of 1¼ in the Italian lira and of 1/16d. in the yen. The Shanghai dollar maintained its previous recovery to 3 5/16d.

BRITISH EXPENDITURE SOARING

British expenditure last week soared to over 57 million pounds, some ten million pounds more than the previous highest weekly total of the current financial year. Revenue amounted to £15,591,000. A year ago expenditure was £32,640,000 and revenue £13,485,000. Supply services last week received £42,150,000.

Receipts (the total for the corresponding week of last year being given in parentheses) included:—Income tax, £3,752,000 (£2,096,000); death duties, £1,610,000 (£2,360,000); Customs, £5,567,000 (£4,574,000); Excise, £960,000 (£684,000), and motor vehicle duties, £589,000 (£862,000).

ABORTION IN CATTLE

REPORT TO DUBLIN HEALTH BOARD

The question of the control of contagious abortion and bovine tuberculosis came again before the County Dublin Board of Health yesterday on a survey of the matter submitted by Mr. John A. Flynn, Chief Veterinary Inspector to the Board.

Regarding contagious abortion, Mr. Flynn stated that the losses in dairy herds were second probably only to those occasioned by tuberculosis in this and other countries where the maintenance of dairy herds forms a very large part of the agricultural programme. A very serious fall in the milk yield also resulted. Contagious abortion in animals could give rise to a very serious disease in men through drinking the milk of infected animals.

The Veterinary Inspector went on to state that there was no known substance which would destroy the causal organism in the affected animal, but abortions might be reduced by means of live vaccine, which should only be used where the presence of the disease had been proved by blood test and where there was heavy infection.

BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS

As regards bovine tuberculosis, Mr. Flynn referred to the existing official methods of control, and said that the veterinary officer met with many cases obviously tubercular with which he could not take action, as they did not come within the scope of the 1925 Order. Mr. Flynn said that the only effective method of dealing with tuberculosis was the wholesale testing of bovine stock and the rigid isolation of clean animals. It would not be practicable owing to the high evidence of the disease to slaughter all unclean animals, as had been done in many of the States of America. He said that the incidence of the disease could be reduced considerably by better housing of animals and by encouraging the reporting of diseased animals in the early stages.

Mr. Flynn made various recommendations to cope with the disease.

The survey was received.

GAINS OUTNUMBER LOSSES ON WALL STREET MARKET

From Reuter's Correspondent.
NEW YORK, Tuesday.

The opinion is held that the Stock Market is acting well in face of the European uncertainties, and the Exchange maintained its composure, though dealings, which were very sluggish, were virtually at a standstill during Mr. Chamberlain's speech.

While both sellers and buyers seem to be equally timid, the sharp crack in British Empire Dollar bonds and the renewed weakness of sterling were somewhat depressing influences.

A total of 723 stocks was traded in the turnover of 590,000 shares. Gains were recorded by 273, and losses by 245.

While Mr. Chamberlain's speech had little influence on the market, prices finally stiffened, and most of the leading issues finished fractionally higher, while the Steels and a few miscellaneous shares registered gains ranging to a point.

The close was steady.

Sterling exchange closed 3⅝c. down at $3.37⅞.

Silver was unchanged at 34¾c.

COMPANY NEWS

HARLAND AND WOLFF

THREEFOLD INCREASE IN NET PROFITS

The report of Harland and Wolff, Ltd., shows that profits last year, after providing for excess profits tax and contingencies, amounted to £812,247, compared with £630,750 in the previous year, when there was no charge for E.P.T. Dividends and interest on investments brought in less at £4,904, against £8,065, and there was a smaller tax refund of £11,782, compared with £16,000. After income tax fees and depreciation—the latter item taking £400,000, compared with £500,000—there is a net profit of £438,937, against £145,227.

As already known, the "A" Ord. shares receive a dividend of 6 per cent. and the "B" 4 per cent. for the year, and, after increasing the reserve by £100,000, the surplus forward is raised from £45,227 to £96,951.

The directors state that the accounts reflect the results of having the companies works well occupied with a general programme of shipbuilding, ship-repairing and engineering, which included an increasing proportion of Government work.

BIG JUMP IN FORD MOTOR PROFITS

RESULT OF SOUND ADMINISTRATION

A big jump in profits is shown in the 1939 accounts of the Ford Motor Co. Trading profit was £2,728,996. This is £1,312,369 higher than in 1938 and £1,152,030 above the record established in 1937.

Sundry profit totalled £44,421 against £302, and included a profit on the Near East branch of £24,184 and a re-transfer of a reserve of £20,000 for loss on debt due from Ford Motor Iberica (Spain) no longer required.

Even after allowing for depreciation and other charges and providing £425,000 (against nil) for E.P.T. and N.D.C., the net profit at £1,310,787 is £909,802 higher than in 1938.

It will be remembered that the directors originally recommended a dividend on the Ordinary capital of 7½ per cent., but, following the British Chancellor's statement on the dividend limitation provisions announced in the Budget speech, the directors altered the dividend to 6 per cent., this rate being the highest paid by the company in the period, to be allowed as standard in the coming Limitation of Dividends Bill.

The amount carried forward is £1,044,037, compared with £755,750.

The directors state that the profits for the year reflect the result of careful prior planning and sound administration. Since the war, the directors add, turnover in both the home and export markets to the end of the year was somewhat lower than in the corresponding months of the previous year, but the totals for the year exceeded those of the preceding twelve months. The company received several contracts from Government departments, and the proportion of business arising therefrom amounted to approximately 15 per cent. of the total turnover.

All subsidiary companies and, with two exceptions, all associated companies earned profits during the year.

EVER READY EARNS MORE

Trading profit of Ever-Ready Company (Great Britain) Ltd., amounted to £707,830, against £506,892, and the net figure to £632,105, compared with £456,958. As already known, the Ordinary distribution is raised from 30 per cent. to 40 per cent., with the payment of a final dividend of 20 per cent. and a bonus of 5 per cent. After placing £194,804, against £124,702, to reserve, there is a balance of £72,564 to be carried forward, compared with £71,136 brought in.

It is stated that sales for the past year advanced by approximately 50 per cent. The directors have written off out of reserve the book value of the company's Continental interests, amounting to £294,804. These factories and business are at the present time all in German territory or territory occupied by that country. The directors anticipate that the businesses or the sterling value thereof will in due course be recovered.

STEWARTS AND LLOYDS

Report of Stewarts and Lloyds, Ltd., shows profit of £1,991,562 in 1939, against £2,049,791 in 1938, and a net profit of £1,213,740, compared with £1,331,234. The consolidated statement shows that the group's profits (other than the profits of the Stanton Ironworks Co.) totalled £1,591,403, against £1,697,870, of which £377,663, against £366,636, has been retained by subsidiary companies. As already known, the company is paying a dividend of 12½ per cent., less tax, on the Deferred stock for 1939, and on the Liaison Deferred shares a dividend at the same rate relatively as on the Deferred stock. There are 625 Liaison shares of £1 in issue, and each share ranks as £1,000 Deferred stock.

FOOD AND PRODUCE MARKETS

CATTLE.

MANCHESTER.—Supplies of fat cattle at the Mode Wheel collecting centre were again fairly light. There is still room for improvement in the quality, the bulk being fat calves. A few lambs and calves were also received. After grading the animals were allocated to Government slaughter-houses.

MERKLANDS—Irish cattle landed during the week totalled 2,823, being 1,015 from Dublin, 69 from Cork, 1,073 from Belfast and 666 from Derry—82 from Belfast and 151 from Derry were fat stock for immediate slaughter, the remainder were store cattle.

GRAIN.

DUBLIN GRAIN.—Fair number of samples on offer, without any improvement in trade, which continues slow at: Oats 22/- to 24/- per barrel delivered.

THE BALTIC.—WHEAT—Further slight weakness on primary centres and a lack of demand imparted easiness to f.o.b. quotations, and Canadian grades were reduced by 3d. to 4½d. per quarter. Australian offered on former terms, but Plates were withdrawn from sale. The following are f.o.b. quotations:—No. 1 Northern Manitoba (Montreal) last half June 36/6, July 36/7½, August 36/9; No. 2 do. last half June 35/7½, No. 1 do. (Vancouver) May 32/6, No. 2 do. 31/10½; No. 1 Canadian Western Garnet (Vancouver) May 30/9, No. 2 do. 30/4½; No. 2 Canadian Amber Durum (Montreal) last half June 33/10½, Australian bulk May 27/6, bags May 29/ per 480lb. MAIZE quiet and easier. Plate new crop May, also June, 14/- per 480lb.

LIVERPOOL CORN.—The attendance at yesterday's spot market was about average, and cereals, more or less inquired for, with trade satisfied, as far as possible, by the Port Area Grain Committee at official prices, distributing firms charging carriage and haulage. Following the decline in American markets, f.o.b. prices of WHEAT for shipment were reduced generally 4½d. per qr. No. 1 Manitoba (Montreal) June quoted 36/3, No. 2 35/9, No. 1 (Van.) May 32/-, No. 1 Canada Western Garnet (Van.) May 30/3, No. 2 29/10½ per qr. BARLEY and OATS not quoted.

SYNOD NOTES

THE SERVICE IN ST. PATRICK'S

From Our Church of Ireland Correspondent.

The Service on Monday evening in St. Patrick's Cathedral was, as usual, very well attended, and was in every way worthy of the occasion. The volume of sound which was evoked by the General Thanksgiving and by the Recessional Hymn ("All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name!") showed that appreciation of congregational worship, the absence of which is often deplored in the criticism of public worship. The Bishop of Kilmore by his text, "These that have turned the world upside down," set the note of consecrated optimism which must characterise the Church of the Living God in days of crisis.

The sinister-looking scaffolding in the church showed the extent of the danger which threatened our beloved Cathedral through the recent fire, and provided another reason for thanksgiving.

THE NINE O'CLOCK MEETING

We are in the habit of expecting something good from the Archdeacon of Clonfert, and this year was no exception. The personal experience of God is a subject of great difficulty for a public discourse, but the Archdeacon's method made it seem almost natural. He started with the universality of the experience, even in the fears of primitive man. His emphasis upon the fact that Jesus Christ expects the experience of God in a life to be followed by action expressed the challenge that faces the Church to-day.

The Dean of Cork rose nobly to the occasion also, and the sigh when he had ended was not a sigh of relief. His blend of grave and subtly gay was a very good mixture. He dealt with the process of the apprehension of God from the mediated to the personal stage. Such experience as the pricking of conscience are experiences of God.

Mr. Harris limited himself wisely, deeply and widely to the consideration of the experience of God in public worship, and left behind him scores of good resolutions.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL

The celebration of Holy Communion in Christ Church Cathedral showed by the attendance that the note of worship which was sounded on Monday evening was not ruffled by the incidence of a meeting at 9 a.m. The walk from College to Cathedral is short enough to permit salutations on the way without precluding punctuality.

THE SYNOD HALL

A packed house welcomed the Primate when he took the chair, and listened with deep interest to his wisdom on a subject dear to him—the religious education of the youth of the Church—and many listeners appreciated his tact in abstaining from references to the war when speaking in the capital of a neutral country.

Sir John Keane and the Dean of Killaloe introduced the bill for women's rights, not as champions of dames, but as advocates of justice. It is on this ground that it will eventually be passed, for speeches have no effect at present upon those who have made up their minds. If speeches had any weight, Mr. Mouritz, in opposition, would have won votes for the enemy for his suggestion that women were like the bramble of Jotham's parable. We were sorry that Mr Brown in his references to 'jam to-day . . .' did not say "bramble jelly." Why did not somebody point out that the Vulgate in Genesis parallels vir and virago? After we had shut the door once more in the faces of the fair we repaired to manse to lunch, provided by the ladies—and a very good lunch it was—better than the sauce which preceded it.

OBITER DICTA

In ancient days Irishmen sometimes came to Synods armed with battle-axes.

Bad temper is bad theology.

PREMIER'S SPEECH REACTION

BITTER GERMAN COMMENT

CHURCHILL'S NEW DUTIES WELCOMED

Mr. Chamberlain's speech in the House of Commons last night has not served to remove the apprehension felt in some, at all events, of the neutral countries. In France and Canada much satisfaction has been expressed at the new powers given to Mr. Churchill.

The speech left the impression in the United States that the Premier, with his huge party machine, will be able to weather the storm. The new powers given to Mr. Churchill are generally welcomed, although observers consider them intended primarily to head off the opposition.

The disclosure that the expedition consisted of only one Division has come as a great shock. While military experts are not surprised, the disclosure, it is felt, will have a bad effect for Britain on the neutrals.

FASTER WAR ACTION

Press Association War Special.

OTTAWA, Tuesday.

While some Canadians express disappointment at the absence of complete details of the Norwegian campaign, Mr. Chamberlain's speech seems to have satisfied official circles. Mr. Churchill's new powers are hailed here as an indication of faster war action in the future.

Canadians have been showing some impatience at the slowness of developments, while finding it difficult to place their fingers on the right spot for improvement.

The man in the street in France also welcomes the announcement of Mr. Churchill's new post. The frankness and courage with which Mr. Chamberlain spoke are admired, and his appeal to close the ranks is warmly approved.

SCATHING GERMAN COMMENT

As soon as the text of Mr. Chamberlain's speech reached Berlin by wireless, officials of the Propaganda Ministry set about preparing instructions for the German newspapers on the line their comment must take to-morrow morning Among the first observations heard were: "Chamberlain revealed how the British under-estimated the might and efficiency of the German Army. His speech was a mass of contradictions."

Attacks on the Government in the subsequent debate are being played up in Germany as proof of the "utter confusion" into which the "glorious German victory" has thrown democratic Britain.

ITALIAN POLITICAL CIRCLES

The belief that Mr. Chamberlain had "won the day" was expressed in Italian political circles after reading the 2,500 words summary of his speech issued by the Official News Agency. In quarters friendly with Britain the speech is described as an honest and fearless effort, in which British loss of prestige was frankly acknowledged.

It is unlikely that the Press will react to-day in the same way. Mr. Chamberlain's speech will, undoubtedly, be stigmatised as an admission that Britain's capacity is exhausted, that her diplomacy and fighting resources are bankrupt.

HOLLAND REMAINS DUBIOUS

Official comment was not forthcoming in Holland, but it is generally felt that the speech contained nothing to make the neutrals radically alter any of their previous judgments. A widespread feeling in Holland was expressed by the newspaper, Het Volk, when it said that Mr. Chamberlain had so far been "more successful in the political arena than on the battlefield."

Nevertheless, due credit is given to the degree of freedom still existing in Britain which made the debate possible.

SWITZERLAND'S BELIEF

Most of the questions which the Swiss Press and public have been asking during the last few days remain unanswered. The Neue Zuercher Zeitung writes: "The British still seem unable to grasp the disastrous effect of a lack of capable leadership, which many people in London still believe to be indispensable. Britain has undoubtedly a number of political personalities at her disposal who would set to work quite differently from Sir John Simon, Sir Samuel Hoare, and some other Ministers whose resignatoins the whole British people would probably greet with relief."

REFUSED TO APPLY FOR RELIEF

UNUSUAL PROSECUTION IN CO. CORK

From Our Correspondent.

CORK, Tuesday.

A man who, although living in poverty, with a sick wife and five children, had declined to apply for the dole or for home assistance, was defendant in a case at Blarney District Court to-day. James O'Callaghan, 109 Kilbarry place, Spangle Hill, was prosecuted by the N.S.P.C.C. for neglecting his children. He did not appear.

Inspector McCabe, N.S.P.C.C., said that the family were often in great need and the children were under-nourished. Any money the man did get he spent on his home.

District Justice O'Sullivan—So the real complaint is that he does not want to go to the Labour Exchange or ask for home assistance. Is not that rather in his favour?

Witness—Yes, but his children are suffering through it.

Evidence was given that defendant had now made an application for unemployment benefit—his first for three years—and had been granted the maximum.

The Justice said that it would be unfair to send a man like that to prison. His only fault was that he did not want to take money for nothing.

Inspector McCabe—I can do nothing with him. It is a form of shyness bordering on insanity.

The Justice imposed a nominal fine of 1s. and costs, and ordered the children to be sent to an industrial school.

DANCE TO AID SOCIAL WORK

A successful dance in aid of the social work of the Holy Child Association and Housing Society took place last night in Shanganagh Castle Hotel, Co. Dublin. The arrangements were in charge of a capable committee, and ther was a large attendance. The Red Tigers' Band provided a suitable programme, and music and dancing continued until a late hour

LIGHT OPERA AT THE GAIETY

"THE SORCERER" AND "COX AND BOX"

In presenting "The Sorcerer" at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, last night, the Rathmines and Rathgar Musical Society realised a long-cherished ambition. It brings them a stage nearer to having presented all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas—the "Grand Duke" is the only one of the works of the inimitable pair, apart from the long-forgotten "Thespis," that now remains unplayed by the Society. More interesting still is it that "The Sorcerer" marked the real beginning of the long line of successes which was to make history for the D'Oyly Carte undertaking. The opera has not been seen for some years—not since the D'Oyly Carte Company itself produced it. In the libretto Gilbert took the central idea of a magic spell woven over a village community by a love philtre. Although the love philtre business had done long service in song and story, Gilbert put new life into the old bones. His dialogue is rich in droll conceits, and his satire on men and things keen and playful. Sullivan's music is appealing in its humour and tender sentiment. The happy understanding between Gilbert and Sullivan is well brought out in the welding of lyrics and music.

The song, "My name is John Wellington Wells," has a jolly swing about it. The part of the "Dealer in magic and spells" was capitally played by A. E. Glynn. His acting had that air of spontaneity that made it convincing. Certainly, his weaving of the spell round the famous teapot was a glorious bit of work, and if his articulation was not perfect in that trying patter song, one could overlook the shortcoming for the other splendid qualities. Robert McCullagh, as Alexis, the young Grenadier Guards officer, with his revolutionary notions, was a great success. He looked the part, acted and spoke his lines with conviction, and sang most entertainingly. Playing opposite him was Hilda White, as Aline. She looked the part, and in her singing and acting her work had the air of savoir faire which comes from long experience. Eileen Knowles also struck the right note in her playing of Lady Sangazure, and Hazel Ellis, though in quieter vein, was effective as Mrs. Partlet. Michael Quinn sang well as Sir Marmaduke, but he would have looked more convincing had he chosen a white or light grey wig. One of the big successes of the night was H. D. Montgomery as the Vicar, Dr. Daly. His make-up was excellent, and his acting equally effective. His singing of "When love and I were well acquainted" was what it was intended to be—one of the happiest things of the opera. Cecil Baror (the Notary), Winnie Marshall (Constance) and Kay Maher (Page) all did well in their respective parts.

The work of the chorus was capital, and it showed what a wealth of talented actors and singers the Society has in reserve.

Preceding "The Sorcerer" there was presented "Cox and Box," that most amusing little musical comedy, which Sullivan did in association with F. C. Burnand before he started his collaboration with Gilbert. The players were Robert McCullagh (Cox), Victor Jackson (Box), and Jack Harte (Sergt. Bouncer). All three of them were first-rate. They showed a fine turn for comedy. The little curtain-raiser went with a merry swing, and was greatly enjoyed.

Mr. Thomas Weaving, musical director, conducted both works, and again showed his intimate understanding of these Savoy operas.

To-night "Ruddigore" will be presented, with Miss Kathleen Maher, winner of the dramatic solo at last week's Feis Ceoil, playing the part of "Mad Margaret."

ALLEGED ILLEGAL CHURCH PRACTICES

CRITICISM OF BISHOPS AND CLERGY

Criticism of the Primate of All Ireland (Dr. Gregg), of the Primate of Ireland, and Archbishop of Dublin (Dr. Barton), and on "many of the clergy" of the Church of Ireland, who, he said, "could not be trusted," was expressed by Dr. F. A. G. Davis, Dublin, a member of the General Synod, when he addressed a meeting in the Gregg Hall, Dublin, last night.

The meeting passed a resolution condemning the increasing introduction into public worship of anti-Protestant doctrine and ritual, contrary to the laws of the Church, particularly "the recent unwarranted use in churches of prayers for the dead," a practice which, the resolution said, was expunged at the Reformation, "being rightly held to imply the doctrine of purgatory, denounced in Article 22, and also to be contrary to the doctrine of justification by faith."

When the resolution was put there were cries of "Aye," followed by a few cries of "No."

The Chairman, Mr. W. H. Going (Cahir) said that he thought the "Ayes" had it, but there was a call for a show of hands.

Cir persons out of a total of nearly two hundred present voted against the resolution.

Proposing the resolution, Mr. C. J. Henry, J.P. (Belfast), said that in Belfast not 20 per cent. of the Protestant community went to church. Things were even worse in England. He believed that in London and some parts of the country not one person in ten went to church. What the people wanted, he said, was fire and enthusiasm from the pulpit, and a return to the old evangelical spirit.

Seconding the resolution, Mr. W. Chamney, Dublin, said that he had done everything in his power to prevent what he called Anglo-Catholic principles from coming into the Church. At present confessions were being heard in a Dublin Church of Ireland church, and so many women were going that the clergyman had to get somebody to take the confessions of the men. (Cries of "Shame.") He appealed to people to do everything they could to prevent ritualism.

"PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD"

Mr. T. J. P. McKeown, Belfast, protested against the recent introduction into the Church of prayers for the dead

Dr. F. A. G. Davis, Dublin, said that the work of the Reformation was in tremendous danger. To realise this they had only to look around them to-day. In India there was Anglo-Catholicism—that meant the taking up of the doctrines of the Church without acknowledging the supremacy of the Papacy. (Cries of "Nonsense.")

In Ireland, said Dr. Davis, they had heads of the Church, like the Primate of All-Ireland, who had been a member of the Commission, one of the unanimous findings of which was close to the Roman doctrine of transubstantiation. He alleged that the Primate of Ireland and Archbishop of Dublin had been responsible for the introduction of prayers for the dead, he having had printed 10,000 pamphlets, which had been distributed all over Ireland, containing the words—"Have mercy on the fallen." If they prayed for those who had fallen in battle they would pray for anybody, said Dr. Davis. He termed this pamphlet "most irregular," and said that the proper course was to have submitted it to the Synod for acceptance or rejection. He had no doubt that the Synod would have "flung it out." Then, at a recent wedding in the National Cathedral of St. Patrick, a cross had been placed on the Table. That was a nice way to begin. The next thing would be that the cross would be there one Sunday, and then every Sunday.

Dr. Davis observed: "This shows what clergy think of their solemn promises to obey the laws of the Church of Ireland." The promise was, he said, a contractual promise, in virtue of which the clergy received money.

One of the causes of all these things was the religious aspect of the Chapel at Trinity College, Dublin, where the Eastern position had been adopted. Divinity students must attend the chapel if they lived in, or lived within a mile and a half of the College.

Mr. F. W. Christie, Belfast, said that he brought greetings from the Protestant people of Northern Ireland to the faithful minority in Dublin, who were surrounded on all sides by members of the Roman Church, and by a strong High Church circle.

Belfast Chamber of Trade at its meeting in the Carlton yesterday decided to send a letter of appreciation to the Lord Mayor (Sir Crawford M'Cullagh, Bart.) for allowing his name to go forward again for the Lord Mayoralty.

GATE THEATRE

"SEA CHANGE"

Percy Bysshe Shelley	Blake Gifford
Mary Shelley (his wife)	Maureen Halligan
Claire Clairmont (her stepsister)	Vivien Dillon
Captain Edward Williams	Charles Blair
Jane Williams (his wife)	Cathleen Delany
Edward John Trelawny	Ronald Ibbs
Lord Byron	John Izon
Mrs. Mason	Nora O'Mahony
Mr. Mason	John Kelly
Caterina (a maid)	Noel Delany

Lady Longford has made a very charming play about Shelley, out of the simple story of the last few months of the poet's life. In January, 1822, he was living with his second wife, Mary, and their child, Percy Florence, in a flat in Pisa. Four years before he had left England for ever. He had filled these years with immortal music, and his life had only a very little longer to run. The tempests of his earlier days had passed, to all seeming, but there was still a tempest in his soul, although it might be hidden for a while among the few simple people he had gathered around him as his friends. These were Captain Edward Williams and his wife, Jane; Mr. and Mrs. Mason, and Edward John Trelawney. They brought him simple understanding and affection, and in the double sunlight of Italy and them a more kindly side of his nature than England had known began to blossom.

True, he could still see himself as Ariel of "The Tempest," to the Miranda of Mrs. Williams, and there were little misunderstandings with Mary, but peace had come to him, and there was a great gentleness in all he thought and did among these people. Not even the fact that Lord Byron was living also in Pisa, while his wife's half-sister, Claire Clairmont, the mother of Byron's child, Allegra, was living in Florence, could bring about complications sufficiently violent to disturb him. He came almost to the point of an angry disagreement with his friend over the matter of Allegra's education and guardianship, but the moment of anger was stilled, and it seemed that even Byron could become a happier man while under his influence. Claire Clairmont, too, could come to live with Mary and him, and know a certain contentment, even after the death of Allegra.

This play, then, might seem, on the whole, to be designed as a reversal of our conception of the earlier, rebellious Shelley, with all the fire gone out of him, before the end. But it was not really so with him, nor is it so in this play. All he had given of himself so vehemently to change so many things in the world he now gave to make the larger meaning of his life, which was his verse. He had crowded his short life with much incident, and, although great suffering had come to him because of his beliefs, his youth remained unsullied by the years, and, like those whom the gods love, he died young. He was Ariel to the very end.

"Sea Change," beneath its simple and charming exterior, is, indeed, a most penetrating study of Shelley's last phase. Lady Longford had not a great deal of material upon which to work—the records of the short period in Pisa are not extensive, nor have they won a great deal of illumination from those through whose hands they have passed since 1822, but there is here a most sympathetic reconstruction of much that we did not know so well before. Perhaps its force and meaning for us now may suffer a little from the fact that we are not afforded any means of direct contrast with the earlier Shelley; but this deficiency—if it is one—is amply compensated by a gentle touch of irony, which is all the better from being almost imperceptible. We hear little on nothing of Shelley's youthful ideas on love and marriage; nothing of the story of Harriet Westbrook, and little enough of the also rebellious Mary Godwin, now the rather demure Mary Shelley; but we see the poet now producing some of his best work under the inspiration, as it were, of Mrs. Williams, who confesses herself to be a stupid, commonplace woman! He had found the larger reality of human freedom in the society he met thrown together by extraordinary chance in Pisa. It had been his wish towards the end to form a society of his own class—that is, in intellect and feelings—and to content himself with the interests of that society. His wish came to him, and with it, too, some of the noblest moments of his genius. He went from all that had made him happy for a while, in a tempest, too, as he had wished:

"I am borne darkly, fearfully afar;
Whilst burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,
The soul of Adonais, like a star,
Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are."

As Shelley, Blake Gifford was in perfect accord at every moment with the mood of the play, and gave his portrait of the poet a most impressive reality. It was, indeed, a magnificent study. The same may be said of John Izon in the smaller, yet not less impressive, study of Byron. The part of Mary Shelley, a little diminished, perhaps, from our preconceived notion of the poet's second wife, was played with sympathy and understanding by Maureen Halligan. For the difficult role of Mrs. Williams Cathleen Delaney was perfectly cast; while Vivienne Dillon as Claire Clairmont held well to the end a part that had only a few moments of real opportunity from her. Ronald Ibbs was a most convincing Trelawney, while Nora O'Mahony, John Kelly, Charles Blair and Noel Delaney were perfect in their small parts.

The production, by Gerald Pringle, was up to his usual high standard. A delightful play had, indeed, every advantage for its enjoyment by a large and enthusiastic audience.

GERMAN BOMBS CANNOT SINK BATTLESHIPS

AMERICAN VIEW

From Reuter's Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.

American naval experts do not believe that Germany is capable of inflicting "serious damage" on the British Fleet by air bombardment, Mr. Charles Edison, Secretary of the Navy, stated to-day before the United States Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

"Frankly," he stated, "I do not think that British battleships will be destroyed. I cannot conceive that the Germans will be able seriously to damage the British Fleet."

Mr. Edison stated that he would ask the present session of Congress for funds to begin building the U.S. Navy to the top strength authorised by Congress. This would increase the Navy by about one-third to a total of nearly 1,500,000 tons.

NEW ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET

APPOINTMENT OF SIR CHARLES M. FORBES

The British Admiralty last night announced that Admiral of the Fleet Lord Chatfield completes five years in that rank to-day, and that in consequence the King has approved the promotion of Admiral Sir Charles M. Forbes to fill the vacancy. Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley B. M. North is promoted to be Admiral.

MINISTER SAYS "NO DISCRIMINATION"

From Our Correspondent.

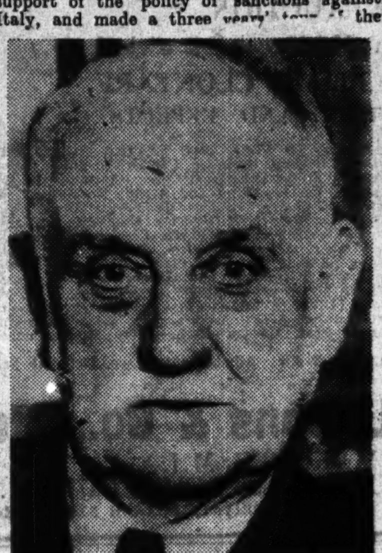

BELFAST, Tuesday.

In the Northern Ireland Parliament to-day, Sir Dawson Bates said that it was a mistake to think that any statutory percentage or quota was prescribed in respect of the R.U.C. for any religious denomination. The total strength of the Special Constabulary at present was 12,500. There was no record of the religious denominations to which members of the force belonged, and it was not true that all members of the force must be subscribing members of an official Unionist association, though he hoped that a great many of them were subscribers.

OBITUARY

MR. GEORGE LANSBURY, M.P.

Mr. George Lansbury, M.P., Socialist, and advocate of peace, died last night in Manor House Hospital, London, where for three weeks past he had been lying seriously ill. He was aged eighty-one. His eldest son, Mr. William Lansbury, and his daughters, Miss Annie Lansbury and Mrs. Ernest Thurtle, were with him when he died. Kings, Presidents, dictators knew George Lansbury. No man was held in more and affectionate regard by members of all parties in the British House of Commons. Throughout his long life he had worked for peace. He was aged seventy-six when he resigned the Presidency of the British Parliamentary Labour Party over its support of the policy of sanctions against Italy, and made a three years' tour of the

Mr. George Lansbury.

United States and Europe, interviewing Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini, with whom he discussed the possibility of removing the causes of war.

A fervent pacifist, Mr. Lansbury continued to act as President of the Peace Pledge Union even after the outbreak of war. Apart from a brief and unsuccessful spell of fortune-seeking in Australia, Mr. Lansbury spent all his life in the East End of London. His home at Bow road was the resort of all who sought a friendly solution of their troubles.

Churchman, teetotaller, and non-smoker, though not a "killjoy," he had been imprisoned twice—first for his activities in the Suffrage movement, and afterwards, with other members of Poplar Borough Council for refusing to agree to levy Poplar rates for the London County Council. He was First Commissioner of Works in Mr. Ramsay Macdonald's administration, and introduced "Lansbury's Lido," which marked the introduction of mixed bathing in the Serpentine at Hyde Park.

Mr. Lansbury first entered Parliament in 1910, as member for Bow and Bromley, and in 1931, at the age of 72, after the "crisis" general election, he took over the leadership of the Parliamentary Labour Party, a little band of 46. He was the sole survivor of the Labour Ministers who had broken with Mr. Ramsay Macdonald in the split. Four years later he sacrificed the leadership. He could not accept the policy of sanctions decided upon by the party during the Italo-Abyssinian war. But Bow and Bromley remained faithful to him and again sent him to Westminster.

Mr. Lansbury celebrated his golden wedding on May 29th, 1930. Mrs. Lansbury died in March, 1933.

Mr. Lansbury's death necessitates a by-election in the Bow and Bromley Division of Poplar. The figures at the last general election were:—Mr. G. Lansbury (Labour), 19,064; Mr. H. E. Weber (Conservative), 5,707—Labour majority 13,357.

ROOSEVELT PLANNING PEACE MOVE?

SPECULATION IN WASHINGTON

Press Association War Special.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.

The belief is growing here that President Roosevelt is planning some move connected with the European war. Some observers even express the belief that a move for peace may be made by the White House coincident with an appeal by the Vatican.

It is pointed out that President Roosevelt hurried back rather unexpectedly from his Hyde Park house. To-day he suddenly cancelled his usual Press conference on the plea that he was writing a speech for delivery to the Scientific Congress in Washington on Friday evening next.

Many journalists, however, are openly wondering whether he is anxious to avoid leading questions concerning recent American diplomatic moves.

The President early this afternoon conferred with Mr. Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State. He lunched with Mr. James Gerard, who was the American Ambassador in Berlin from 1914 to 1917.

GERMAN ASSURANCE TO SWEDEN

MAY BE DUE TO GOERING

Press Association War Special.

STOCKHOLM, Tuesday.

The influence of Field-Marshal Goering—whose first wife was Swedish—is seen here in the assurance given by Herr Hitler to King Gustav agreeing to respect the neutrality of Sweden. The completeness of Sweden's defence preparations is also considered to have made a big impression on the Fuehrer.

King Gustav, it is believed, took the initiative in the correspondence between the two rulers. Earlier numerous feelers had been put out and unofficial conversations held. The text of the letters is not likely to be disclosed, nor is there any indication of what may have led the King at this stage to re-emphasise Sweden's determination to remain neutral. Meanwhile it is fully recognised that Sweden is still in the danger zone and cannot relax her watchfulness.

ALLEGED TELEPHONE TALK

GERMAN PRESS CLAMOUR

Press Association War Special Telegram

BERLIN, Tuesday.

The clamour in the German Press this morning over the German report of an alleged "telephone conversation" between Mr. Chamberlain and M. Reynaud is maintained in the evening editions.

The alleged conversation has been emphatically denied by official quarters in both London and Paris.

All papers profess the opinion that the "conversation" is proof that an Anglo-French attack on a neutral State is at hand.

"It is evident," says the Berlin correspondent of the Telegraaf, "that the publication of the alleged Chamberlain-Reynaud conversation is meant to convince the threatened neutrals and the German people that the German Government has not only the right, but even the duty, to take appropriate counter-measures."

WAGE INCREASE

Following negotiations between the No. 1 Branch of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union and the Tea and Wine Merchants, conducted under the auspices of Federated Employers, Ltd., workers in the Dublin tea and wine trade have secured increases in wages of 4s. per week.

The offer was accepted at a meeting of the workers concerned

MOSCOW ACCUSES FINNS

ALLEGED VIOLATION OF TREATY

Press Association Foreign Special.

MOSCOW, Tuesday.

The Finns are accused of having violated the Soviet-Finnish peace treaty by destroying or damaging factories in the territory ceded to Russia in an article in Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, to-day.

Citing the Kexholm cellulose works as an instance, it declares that the damage there could not have been caused by bombing, as such operations were not carried out in its vicinity. There were indications that it was caused by explosives placed under the machinery.

Many factories were sabotaged by the removal of machinery parts, Pravda adds. Among them was the paper pulp factory at Enso, near the Imatra Falls, where the plant was rendered useless.

After contrasting this state of affairs with conditions in Petsamo, where, it claims, the Red Army even swept the streets and restored broken window-panes, Pravda concludes by asking: "Who authorised this shameless infringement of the terms of the peace treaty?

"How was it that the Finnish Command permitted the carrying out of such wrecking activities on territory which was being handed over to Soviet Russia? Is this the way Finland fulfils her obligations?"

COLLEGE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Bishop of Kilmore will take the chair at the meeting of the above Society to be held this (Wednesday) evening, at 8 o'clock, in the Graduates' Memorial Building, Trinity College.

Mr. J. J. Lord will propose the motion—"That Expediency is the Only International Law."

The motion will be seconded by Mr. J. M. H. Russell and opposed by Messrs. W. W. L. Rooke and S. W. Christie (Librarian).

The meeting will be open to the public.
